Brazil's Agriculture Gains Rapidly; Little of the Benefit Goes to the Poor

By JONATHAN KANDELL FOZ DO IGUACU, Brazil, Aug. 9.—Only a dozen years ago, thick tropical forests covered most of this gently rolling landscape extending to the edge of the Parana River and the spectacular Iguaçu Falls.

Today the Brazilian state of Parana, wedged between Paraguay and Argentina, has become one of the breadbaskets of the continent. A bumper crop of soybeans was harvested only a few weeks ago, and already the fields are bristling with knee-

Agriculture is the less pub-licized half of the so-called Brazilian economic miracle. Its rapid growth has been as controversial as the urban industrial expansion that has gained Brazil its reputation abroad as one of the most dynamic developing countries.

A Juggling Act

Governments in most developing countries face a difficult juggling act: to com-bat rural poverty by a more equitable distribution of land and agrarian resources, to provide farmers with high enough food prices and other production and to keep food costs low enough to satisfy the urban poor.

By and large the righternment has chosen agrarian policies that benefit the wellto-do farmer through high food prices, subsidies and cheap credit. Ecocomic policy in agriculture, as in other sectors, has emphasized growth over equitable distribution in the belief that the accumulation of wealth will eventually filter down to even the poorest sectors.

The allure and drawbacks of Brazil's development model have appeared in sharp re-lief because of the poor performance of agriculture else-where in Latin America and the recent emergence of likeminded military governments throughout the hemisphere.

in Latin America as a whole, agricultural produc-tion has failed to keep pace with population growth. The region's traditional role as a food exporter is in decline, placing the more afflicted Asian and African countries in need of new sources of

Most Choose Industry

In most Latin American countries the agricultural lag has resulted from a strong government bias in favor of industrial growth and low food prices for rapidly ex-panding urban populations. In some nations, such as Chile and Peru, food production has also faltered because of hadly managed agrarian reform programs. By contrast Brazilian agri-

LIBYA ASKS PARLEY ON EGYPT'S BUILDUP

CAIRO, Aug. 15 (AP)—Libya called today for an urgent meeting of the Arab League council to discuss an Egyptian troop buildup on its border, and President Anwar el-Sadat of President Anwar el-Sadat of Egypt threatened retaliation for a series of hombing incidents he ascribes to the Libyans.

Contacts are being made to arrange the meeting a League official said, but it will have to be delayed because many Arab ministers are attending a conference of leaders of the non-aligned nations in Sri Lanka.

Mr. Sadat made his threats

Mr. Sadat made his threats during a stopover in Oman on his way to Sri Lanka. He spoke a day after a bomb planted on a train in Alexandria killed 8 Egyptians and wounded 51. Mr. Sadat blamed the Libyan leader, Col, Muammar el-Quaddafi, for the killings and for earlier bomb cultural output has increased more than a 100 percent since the 1960's, thanks to generous incentives and sub-sidies under the 12-year-old military Government.

More new land has been brought under cultivation than anywhere ease in the Americas. And as vast new areas are opened to agricul-ture, Brazil will probably become a major world supplier of essential foods in another decade, according to agrarian

The country already has twice as many cattle as Argentina. It harvests more sugar than Cuba. By 1980 Brazil expects to be selfsufficient in wheat; only a decade ago it produced only a fifth of the wheat it con-

More dramatic still has been the success of soybean agriculture. Since 1964 pro-duction has multiplied 40 times, and Brazil has emerged as the second largest soy-bean exporter in the world after the United States. While the automobile facof Rio de Janeiro are the glamorous symbols of Bra-zilian conomic growth, agri-culture products continue to account for almost 60 percent of exports.

Agriculture has assumed even greater importance now that the "miracle" years of 10 percent annual economic growth have abruptly halted under the effects of the world recession and the steep climb of oil prices. It is the record foreign-exchange earnings from coffee and soybeans that are keeping the balance-of-payments deficit from running out of control. And agricultural expansion is the most promising source of income to pay for increasingly expensive oil and machinery imports needed to fuel the nation's drive toward devel-

But Brazil's agrarian surge has demonstrated many of the same inequities, failures and gaps that have made the rest of the country's economic model controversial.

Despite the country's rapid economic growth, the real wages of unskilled laborers have declined steeply because of inflation. And food prices have generally led the rise in the cost of living.

As a result, nutritionists es-timate that 40 percent of the 110 million Brazilians are suffering from malnutrition. In the northeastern state of Ba-hia, the health secretariat listed mainutrition as the indirect cause of 80 percent of the 17,000 child deaths in 1974.

In São Paulo officials estimate that undernourishment accounts for more than 40 percent of the deaths registered among children I to 4 years of age. In Rio de Janeiro a survey taken in late 1973 by the Government-supported Getulio Vargas Foun-

The immediate objectives of attending the needs of our foreign markets have made us forget the principal prob-lem," said Romulo de Almeida, an economist and former president of the Northeast Bank. "That is, agriculture for the domestic market remains inefficient and expen-sive and has few prospects of overcoming this rut."

The unbalanced develop-The unbalanced development of agriculture is as apparent in the countryside as in the cities. About 50 million Brazilians still live in rural zones, and the vast majority of them eke out a living as ill-paid employees or as subsistence farmers.

Agrarian reform has never been carried out. A billion-dollar plan to redistribute dollar plan to redistribute land in the poverty-stricken northeast was announced during the early 1970's, but it has not been carried oot. An ambitious program to settle the vast Amazon area with landless peasants has also been largely abandoned because most of the jungle soil has proved too infertile for intensive agriculture.

for intensive agriculture. Economy Has Priority Elsewhere in the country fertile land is considered too valuable to risk on socially motivated reforms. "We must meet our social goals without compromising economic priorities, Julian Magalhaes Chacel, an economist, said at a recent agricultural seminar sponsored by the Government in Bra-silia. "Under any circum-stances, agrarian reform subverts the productive process, and this is not the ideal moment to review the policies that have ben adopted until now in the countryside."

Like other government economists, Mr. Chacel asserted that only the larger farmers and agrarian enterprises are able to make Brazilian agriculture competitive in the world markets.

Much of the same thinking has propelled the rapid transformation of the lands around Foz do Iguaçu and the rest of Parana State. A Success Story

Cleodon de Albuquerque, the president of the local agrarian association is a agrarian association, is a fairly typical example of the kind of success that well-to-do farmers have achieved in Foz do Iguaçu.

The son of affluent farmers Mr. Albuquerque arrived here 10 years ago as a government bank executive from his native from his native state of Alagoas, 1,600 miles to the northeast. With a sound knowledge the Government's policy of generous agricultural loans, Mr. Albuquerque soon decided to join his bank's clients and become a farmer himself. He bought his jungle-coverel parcel from the Government mostly on credit, at $12 an acre with two years to pay and no integers. years to pay and no interest.

Your Godalming Guide

Take this page with you when you buy your next sweater his is a modest work. Won't tell you "how to" achieve fame, fortune or success with fair ladies. Will tell you how to get the best possible sweater for your money: The Good Wool Sweater.

Why Godalming? If space allows, we'll tell you later.

Now. About wool. Pure wool is good. Pure lambswool is better. This first clip from the baby sheep is soft, resilient, comfortable and warm. The Alan Paine sweaters on this page are pure lambswool.

About yarn. Two-ply yarns provide greater wearing qualitites than single yarns. Both these beauties are two-ply.

About knitting. Some sweaters are knit in pieces, cut, then sewn together. Alan Paines are full fashioned. You can see the stitch-narrowing at the shoulders. That means you get a smooth fit, whether your shoulders are square or sloping.

About seaming. Look inside the sweater. If it's an Alan Paine, it has selvage edges, so seams lie flat, can't ravel.

About milling. The natural oils used in knitting these sweaters are milled (washed) out by an expert to bring up a perfect fullness and tone.

About finishing. The Alan Paine sweater you buy has been pressed by hand.

PURE WOOL

The sewn-in Woolmark label is your assurance of quality-tested fabrics made of the world's best...Pure Wool.

About color. A. Paine's craftsmen create their own colors. And this year they're terrific. Our cardigan (note the one-piece pockets) comes in Bermuda blue, Lovat (green) mix, spicey Red Ice, Natural, Gray or Black, 45.00. The pullover (with new 6-inch high turtleneck) is black, light blue, blond, yellow, red ice or lovat, 29.50. Both for sizes 38 to 46.

And as we said, you can carry this check list in your wallet. Or simplify your life and pick up an Alan Paine or two from Altman's new collection.

P.S. About Godalming. That's the town in Surrey, England, where these sweaters are knit. Been a wool center since at least 1391.

P.P.S. Yes, there is an Alan Paine. Guess where he lives? Godalming, by golly.

"That's the end of a barraca and soon they will all go," 56-year-old Maria Adelaide Gouveia, who has lived 20 years in a barraca, or shack, told a visitor to the Santas Martas shantytown.

Santas Martas is one of the oldest shums outside Lisbon and sprawls just over the hill from the elegant embassy row of suburban Alges.

In the last three or four years Santas Martas has expanded rapidly with the influx of refugees from Portugal's former colonies in Africa, particularly the Cape Verde Islands. The Cape Verdeans have re-created African yillage atmosphere here with their taverns, children playing on roller carts and women pounding corn.

contracted with builders, and construction got under way a year ago at Zambujal, about five miles inland.

As the constructions are completed, the people from Santas Martas are moved, large families first, Mr. Martins Ferro explained. He said that there were two types of housing. People with low or housing. People with low or irregular wages can rent apartments for 10 percent of apartments for 10 percent of the family income, or for free if there is no income. People with a stable income can buy houses for around $8,000, paying low installments over 20 years.

Israeli Justice Chief Is Opposed to Death In Terrorist Cases

By IRVING SPIEGEL

WASHINGTON, Aug. 15— Haim J. Zadok, Israel's Minister of Justice, strongly opposed to-day the use of capital punish-ment against terrorists. He stressed that decisions regarding the punishment of terrorists "must be guided by cool judgment rather than by emotional

"Capital punishment," he said, "would not serve Israel's best interests. Not only would it oot deter potential terrorists but it would create martyrs. thus providing an example for others to follow."

Mr. Zadok contended that capital punishment would "focus attention on saving the lives of so-called 'freedom fight-ers' rather than focusing atten-tion on the graveness of their terrorist acts."

Mr. Zadok's remarks were made in an interview before he spoke at the opening session of the 62d annual convention of Hadassah at the Workinstein of Hadassah at the Washington Hilton Hotel, More than 2,500 delegates representing 350,000 members of the Jewish women's volunteer organiza-tion are attending a four-day

"At the present time," Mr. Zadok said, "there is a standing instruction by the 1sraeli Government to the prosecutors of criminal trials not to ask for capital punishment except for the most grave crimes of terrorism. This practice is en-

Hampshire in January, and that was the strategic picture when the delegates arrived in Kansas City. All the jet flights, all the flights of oratory, all the sudden surges and near-collapses and comebacks, all the victories and defeats, served only to confirm the initial reality.

The President won the first three tests -in New Hampshire, Florida and Illi-nois-and it appeared that Mr. Reagan would have to withdraw. But the Cali-fornian then arrived on the more hospitable ground of North Carolina, where he made two important changes in his campaign style. At the urging of Tom Ellis, a canny Raleigh lawyer, he turned -to the heavy use of television, capitalizing on his experience as an actor, end he began savaging Mr. Ford's record, particularly in foreign policy. The result was a victory that kept his cempaign

There followed a series of important Reagan victories-in Texas, where he stunned the Ford camp by sweeping all 100 delegates; in Indiana, where he demonstrated strength in the Northern ındustrial statea; in Nebraska, where he showed farm-belt appeal. But the President hung grimly on, and Mr. Reagan never quite acored the knockout blow that he needed to win.

The decisive victory eluded him io Michigan, Mr. Ford's bome state; in Ohio, where he made only a token campaign in the last few days, and elsewhere. His sweeps in Texas and in Cali-fornia kept him close to the President in the delegate count, and be ended up by winning more total primary votes than Mr. Ford.

Husbaoding his funds for use else-where, Mr. Reagan skipped the primaries in four of the 10 largest states (New York, New Jersey, Massachuselts and Pennsylvania) and made limited efforts in two others (Ohio and Michigan). Had be won 25 delegates each in New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania— certainly a modest goal—he would now be the favorite,

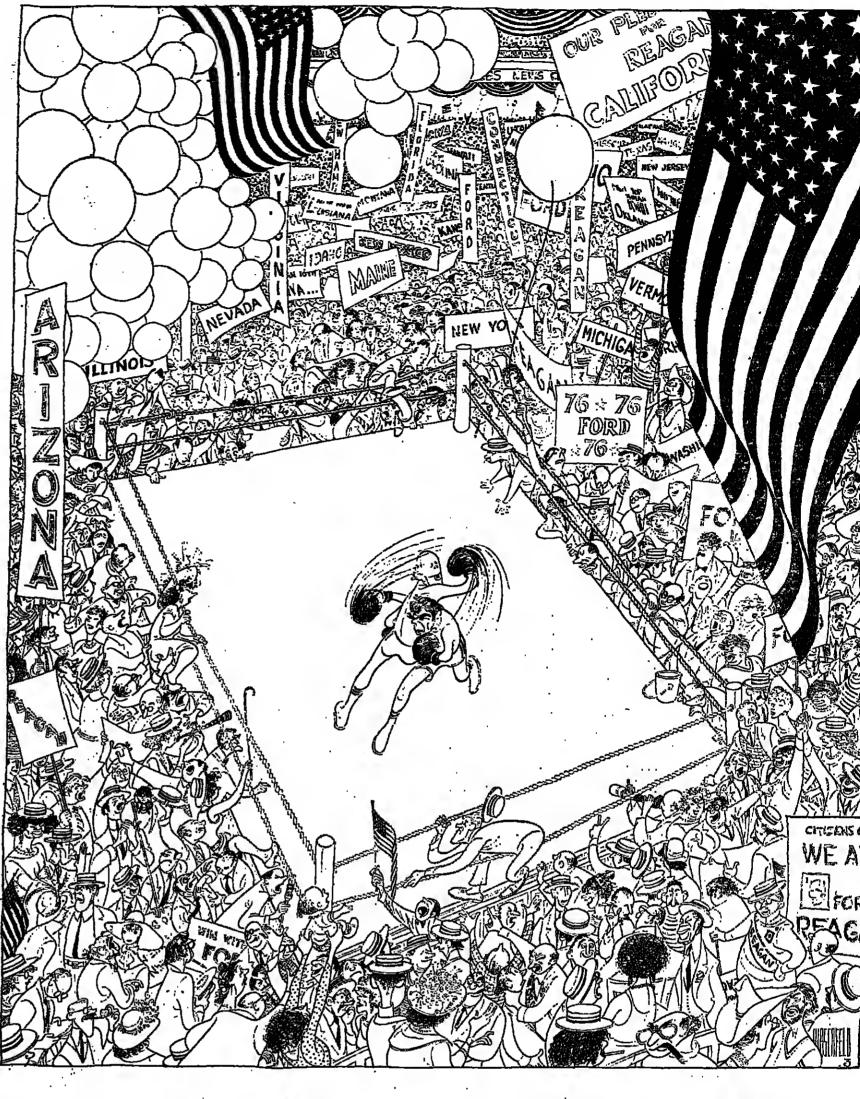

· As it is, Mr. Reagan's strength is concentrated in the South and West; Mr. Ford's in the East and Midwest-a different alignment from that along which the Republicans bave historically split, with Midwest opposing East. Until recently, a candidate whose base included neither the East nor the Midwest would bave been hopelessly outnumbered.

But the explosive growth of the Sun-belt states, the dramatic improvement a Republican apportionment system that favors the smaller states have combined to alter the political arithmetic in favor of former Governor Reagan. In the South and West, and in some states of the agricultural rather than industrial Midwest, the conservative gospel preached by Mr. Reagan had a far broader: appeal than Mr. Ford's alcan wingism is some help in he resplendent symmetry of ties running through the party irrowly divided convention. It account, though, for the fact dent Ford and his oppositewinger, Ronald Reagan, both call themselves conservatives.

It doesn't explain why Senator Barry Goldwater, the paladin of the old New Right, is supporting Mr. Ford, as is Clarke Reed of Mississippl, tha leading edge for the last decade of the Southern right wing.

It also ignores the interesting point that as recently as the 1968 convention there were three wings in the Grand Old Party-Mr. Reagan's on the right, Nelson Rockefellers on the left and Richard Nixon's in the center—and that this year's combination, by and large, of center and left for Mr. Ford haa not been enough to dominate clearly the resurgent Reaganites.

is strikingly simple: To the north and east, excepting only Missouri and In-diana, President Ford controls 21 state delegations and the District of Columbia; sweeping clockwise, however, over the South, the Southwest and North again. Mr. Reagan has everything but Florida, Oregon and North Dakota.

The impression of sharply drawn regional lines conflicts, in turn, with the fact that so many established Republican leaders of either wing within the Reagan region support Mr. Ford. In addition to Mr. Goldwater and Mr. Reed, there are such figures as Gov. James Holshouser of North Carolina, Senator Howard Baker of Tennessee, Senator John Tower of Texas, Senator Pete Domerici of New Mexico, Representa-tive John J. Rhodes of Arizona, Senator Jake Garn of Utah and Gov. Daniel J.

Evans of Washington.

Better than it fits patterns of regionelism or ideological wingism, the Repub-lican contest suggests the collision of a movement and an establishment. It seems less a battle of ideologies than a difference about the value of ideology in practical politics. Over-all it represents not so much a conflict of sectional interests as it does a struggle between places that bave some lingering Republican organization and other places where the Republican Party has never taken firm hold or has lost whet it

It is significant that the states supporting Mr. Ford at this convention account for two-thirds of the Republican membership in the House of Representatives. In that sense, the drama being played out at Kansas City is not a split in the party but a takeover bid by in-spired outsiders who feel, like the Amercan commander in the Vietnamese village, that they may have to destroy the G.O.P. in order to save it.

The question for the party is akin to the puzzle about what happens when an irresistible force meets an immovable

The irresistible force in this collision is the exuberant and relatively fresh -if not exactly youthful-militancy of the Reagan conservatives. What they lack in local power bases (the only governors in their ranks are Meldrim Thomson Jr. of New Hampshire and James Edwards of South Carolina) they bave made no in the cohesive strength of a few dramatic national issues, from abortion to the Panama Canal.

Though they are a minority of that minority of the electorate that calls itself Republican, they draw strength from outside the party, as Mr. Reagan demonstrated in primary states-Indiana and Texas, for example-where non-Republicans could cross over to vote for him. The fact that they have virtually tied the score in national convention delegates while Mr. Ford runs nearly 2-to-1 ahead of Mr. Reagan in the latest Gallup Poll hints at the superiority of their leadership and tactical skill.

The immovable object, on the other hand, the establishment in the confrontation here, is the aging, varied, perennially fragile band of Republican officeholders. Their numbers have been shrinking lately-down after the Watergate-

Harry Truman's Town Has Gotten Up to Date

By B. DRUMMOND AYRES Jr.

Special to The New York Times KANSAS CITY, Mo., Aug. 15-This is a Democratic city, Harry Truman's

But suddenly Republicans are swariniog all over the place, 20,000 of them in search of a Presidential nominee. They have even invaded the burnished mahogany lobby of the famed old Radisson-Muehlebach Hotel, Mr. Tru-man's "Midwest White House." Sam Harris, a bellbop there since the Truman days, thinks the late President would give 'em hell if he were still around. "He wouldn't like it," Mr. Harris says.

In that case, Mr. Truman would apparently be in the minority hereabouts. Many Kansas City residents, Democrats amd Republicans alike, see the 1976 Republican National Convention, which opena here tomorrow, as a golden opportunity to show off the urbao renaissance that has taken place here in recent years as new blood has moved in and the city has refurbished.

Citizens of every political persuesion want to lay to rest for all time the longstanding myth that Kansas City is an isolated cow town with a highly developed inferiority complex. That desire was the main force behind the city's strong bid to be chosen the 1976 convention site.

The Mayor, a staunch Democrat named Charles B. Wheeler Jr., is confident that the myth can be dispatched. They'll love us," he says of the convention delegates, reporters and guests.

The sense of civic pride is so great in Kansas City these days that more than 2,000 residents are doing volunteer work to guarantee that convention visitors enjoy themselves.

"A lot of the volunteers are Democrats," says Mariann Tow, their coordinator. "This may be a Republican convention, but what happens to Kansas City is equally important This is our. big chance to show what we've really

Some of the volunteers are manning

information booths in delegate hotels or ecting as tour guides. A number are throwing perties for entire delegations. And several dozen have taken in delegates and journalists to relieve an embarrassing shortage of quality hotel

What generates such civic eothusiasm is apparently the tremendous change Kansas City has seen in recent years. There are still some major problems eround, among them white flight from the downtown, spreading black slums, a deterioratiog public school system and too many strips of fast-food stores.

But the city has acquired a forward momentum since 1970 as a result of the completion of an airport, interstate highway links, soaring office buildings and sprawling industrial plants valued in all at more than $5 billion. Further, the city's isoletion in the middle of the farm belt has suddenly become an asset in a world beset by food shortages...

"God and geography have been good to us," says Mayor Wheeler.

Almost half a million people now live in Kansas City proper. A million or so more live in a score of contiguous suburbs and cities, among them Kansas City, Kan., just across the Missouri

Agribusiness is still king in Kansas City-especially with the high prices of grain and beef-but more and more Kansas Citians are becoming involved in other business fields, among them auto assembly, warehousing, regional distribution and clothing production.

The Kansas City of 1976 bears almost no resemblance to the one in which Democrats met in 1900 to nominate William Jennings Bryan, who would run. against William Mckinley, the eventual winner. There was dust in the streets then, along with steers and cowboys and maybe even tumbleweed.

Republicans Unable to Avoid the Symbols of Watergate

By JAMES M. NAUGHTON

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Aug. 15-They've gune about as far as they could go. San . Clemente is 1,589 miles west, Washington is 1,043 miles east. Still the Republicans cannot elude the symbols, at onposite ends of the continent, of the memory they came to the beartland hoping to erase. Former President Richard M. Nixon's exile on the Pacific Coast and the Watergate office complex on the edge of the Potomac River constitute not so much geographic as spiritual bounds around a Republican Party struggling to break free.

."Most delegates have closed their eyes and honed Watergate is bebind them," said a strategist for one of the rivals for

AND RESERVED TO SECURE OF THE PARTY OF THE P

If the scandal is not really behind them. says a strategist for one contender, the delegates will simply act as though it is the party's Presidential nomination. "If not, we'll act as though it is," he added.

The desire to be myopic is strong.
One senior White House official said. the other day that he did not expect the Nixon pardon to figure significantly in either the convention or the election campaign. "It's one thing to disagree with President Ford for pardoning Nixon, which a lot of people do." said the wistful aide. 'But I don't think the Democrats can get away with questioning his mutives."

Mr. Nixon was deliberately excluded from the guest list at the Kansas City convention, the first of his party that ha will have missed in three oecades. Nor is anyone apt to mention from the rostrum of Kemper Arena bere the burglary that took place four years ago last month at Watergate.

But the scandal that since has plagued the Republicans may not be easily blinked away. The Democratic ticket of Jimmy Carter and Walter F. Mondale stands prepared to remind anyone who may bave been cloistered for the last few years what happened during the Watergate era. Mr. Carter has already tegun referring to the "Nixon-Ford Adminimum" and Senator Mondale has order Willergate "one of the most imall issues this election year." The Democrats' reminders seem, especially amid the Kansas City convention proceedings, to be superfluous. Try as they might, the Republicans can hardly help but bring on pangs of self-inflicted

The campaign provides a succession of unoleasant Republican anniversaries. The opening convention ceremonies tomorrow will take place one week efter the second anniversary of Mr. Nixon's unprecedented resignation from the Presidency. Friday, the day the Republicans begin leaving Kanses City, will mark the second anniversary of Mr. Ford's nomination of Nelson A. Rockefeller to be the third Republican Vice President in 13 months. Sept. 8 will mark the second anniversary of Mr. Ford's grant of "a full, free and absolute pardon unto Richard Nixon." Oct. 10 will be the third anniversary of the resignation in disgrace of former Vice President Spiro T. Agnew. And scarcely two weeks before the national elections. on Oct. 20, will occur the third anniversary of Mr. Nixon's so-called "Saturday Night Massacre."

John Dean, Reporter

As if all that were not enough to impose on the Republicans, Rolling Stone magazine has assigned as its chronicler nf the convention John W. Dean 3d, the firmer White House legal counsel whose testimony to Congress and the courts began the unraveling of the Nixon Presidency. Seated in the ABC News television booth above the convention floor will be enother guest commentator, Senator George McGovern, the Democrat who lost the Watergate election to Mr.

Mr. Dean and Senator McGovern will exhibit remarkable restraint if either fails to call attention to the backgrounds of the convention's leading per-

President Ford is not alone in the effort to dissipate the Watergate cloud. Ronald Reagan, his challenger for the Presidential numination, defended Mr. Nixon to the end.

Senator Howard H. Baker Jr., the convention keynoter, was the member of the Senate Watergate committee who kept asking through the summer of 1973 what Mr. Nixon knew and when he learned it.

Baker on Ford's List

Mr. Baker is one of those on President Ford's list of prospective running mates. Sn is Commerce Secretary Elliot L. Richardson, who was the Attorney General until Mr. Nixon dismissed him for refusing to dismiss the original special prosecutor. So is John B. Connally, the former Texas Governor and Treasury Secretary, who still is trying to explain why he recommended that Mr. Nixon burn the Watergate tape recordings. Three of the convention delegates, Representatives Paul Findley and Thomas F. Railsback of Illinois and William S. Cohen of Maine, are spearheading efforts to dissuade Mr. Ford, if he wins the nomination, from selecting Mr.

Connaily as a ticket mate. "Our long national nightmare is over," Mr. Ford said when he assumed office precipitately on Aug. 9, 1974. A month later be explained his pardon proclamation by saying in part that the tragedy of Watergate "can go on and on, or someone must write 'the end' to it.'

Yet for the Republican Party, at least, the bad dream seems a recurring one, and if a final chapter has been written it does not seem to bave been convincingly circulated.

In their efforts to date to keep Watergate at the forefront of public consciousness, Mr. Carter and Mr. Mondale appear to bave developed a sort of good guy-bad guy style.

Mr. Carter said in an interview earlier this month that it was fair to saddle Mr. Ford with Mr. Nixon's image, "not the dishonesty and the disgrace of Nixon but the continuation of Nixon's

Mr. Mondale said he felt it incumbent to keep raising the "worst political scandal in our bistory" because that might help keep pressure on the Government to produce political reforms.

Should Mr. Reagan win the nomination here he can be expected to mount a counteroffensive against the Democratic ticket.

Mr. Reagan merely "defended Nixon until Nixon resigned," said Lyn Nofziger, the former California Governor's convention director. "If you presume a man is innocent until otherwise indicated, we don't think that's a drawback," be added.

Moreover, Mr. Nofziger said, "if Carter can stick us with the Nixon-Ford Administration we'll stick him with the Democratic Congress." President Ford's candidacy, if endorsed by the Republican convention, will face more complex Watergate problems. He is the direct and chosen heir to Mr. Nixon. Some of Mr. Ford's strategists have counseled bim to select a running mate-such as Mr. Richardson or Senator Baker-whose image as a Watergate investigator would help to blunt any Watergate attacks. Strategic Error Seen

One Republican strategist expresses private hope that, by focusing on Watergate: "Jimmy Carter may outsmart him-

"He goes around preaching 'compassion' while Mondale kicks a fallen Presi-dent," the party official said. "I'm not sure the American people want to kick Nixon around any more. His wife just recently got ont of the hospital."

Mr. Reagan made skillful use in those states of trigger issues -that is, relatively narrow topics that suggest far broader ones Perbaps the best example of 1976 was the Panama Canal, which seemed to evoke for many conservative voters a whole series of images, nnt least the American humiliation in Vietnam.

All of this was delivered, in person and nn televisinn, with the zest and practiced humor, the earnestness and silky ease of a polished performer. It was in sharp contrast to Mr. Ford's rather wooden demeanor and his tendency tn be thrown constantly on the de-

As the President himself commented in an interview not long ago, his campaign did a poor job of selling his accomplishments. In part, of course, that was his own fault; in part It was the result of a curious inability of his Administration and his campaign committee to work in tandem. Almost every week, there was a decision somewhere in the Administrating for which the political consequences had evidently not been weighed with much care.

One of the President's most serious problems was in finding the proper way to use the powers of incumbency. All year long, his advisers debated the question, one they never completely resolved. So during the campaign, the nation was shown several Geraln Fords: Ford the sugar daddy, handing out Federal projects in New Hampshire and Florida like a ward boss distributing Christmas turkeys; Ford the frantic campaigner, dashing from state to state to implore his party not in reject him; Ford the leader, eschewing campaigning in an effort to appear more "Presidential," and finally Ford the one-on-one man, inviting individual delegates to the White House to try to persuade them, sometimes giving one obscure delegate more of his time in one day than he gives in an entire year to the ambassador from a middle-sized country. Somebow-perbaps because the electorate had no emotional investment in Mr. Ford, never having voted for him in the past—none of the approaches seemed to work. Despite such appurtenances of office as Air Force One, he seemed a candidate like all the others. not, in Richard Nixon's phrase, the leader of the Western world. The politicians gave him his due, lining up behind his candidacy in the best regular Republi-can tradition, but the voters did not. The result will be evident on the flnor this week; in the Reagan delegations, there is scarcely a familiar face, but in the Ford delegations, senators and governors and mayors abound.

It bas been a campaign, and it will

Tomorrow

In all likelihood, some of the convention's most dramatic developments will occur tomorrow. Both the platform and the rules will be debated, and Mr. Reagan is expected to seize on one or more questions in search of an early victory over President Ford.

The most likely focus of the battle will be the rules, especially the one known as 16-c, which deals with the Vice Presideocy. The Reagan camp hopes to force President Ford to declare his choice for Vice President in advance - because they think it would cost him delegates in one area of the country or another. They lost in the rules committee yesterday on a 59-44 vote, but they think they are slightly stronger on the floor of the cooventioo. This will probably be the vote. In addition, the Reaganites will mount a secondary effort to defeat a rule that would require strict adherence to state laws on the Presidential roll-call because they would get more votes if delegates were free to vote their own preferences.

Whatever the Issues, the voting will give some clue to the allegiance of the doubtful delegations. If Mr. Ford falla below 15 votes in Mississippi, below 130 in New York, or below 85 in Pennsylvania, his candidacy is in trouble.

Among the more divisive platform issues may be the Equal Rights Amendment, which is opposed by Mr. Reagan and favored by Mr. Ford. If roll-call votes on platform planks are required, the session could stretch into early

In the midst of all the wrangling, former Gov. John B. Connally of Texas expected to address the convention. If anyone turns the delegates on it should be the hig Texan, who is one

The Presidential roll-call. If the Reagan forces have managed to defeat the socalled "justice rule"—the one dealing with adherence to state laws on voting -delegates pledged to Mr. Ford but favorable to Mr. Resgan may attempt to abstain. It might well happen first in the Keotucky delegation; no matter where it happened, it would provoke a tremendous parliamentary uproar.

If the hiddeo Reagan streogth claimed by bis managers materializes, it should appear when the New Jersey, New York and Pennsylvania delegations are called. It would be a major surprise if the challenger got more than 10 in New Jersey or 25 io New York.

One state in which there is substantial doobt about the count is Illinois. Mr. Ford has 81 sure votes, and Mr. Reagan

12. The question is which way the eight uncommitted delegates will jump. Tha answer could suggest a trend and influence later votes.

Thursday

If Mr. Ford is the wincer, he will prooably announce his Vice-Presidential choice Thursday morning, and it is possible that the announcement will pre-cipitate a fight Thursday evening. Some Northeastern delegates may rebel if the President names Mr. Coonally, for instance. But it is highly unlikely that they could nrevail.

If Mr. Reagan wins, there may be an attempt by conservatives to impose someone other than Senator Richard S. Schweiker of Pennsylvania on him. Such an effort would have a slightly better chance of success. The show will close with speeches by the nominees and the obligatory

TV Schedule

The ooly television network that has announced full gavel-togavel coverage of the Republican National Convention is NBC. Most of the proceedings will be broadcast on CBS, but the network is calling its coverage "comprehensive" because it may cut away for local newcasts.

Both NBC and CBS planned to begin their television broadcasts at 11:30 A.M. today to cover the only morning session of the convention, Both will return to the air at 7:30 for the first evening's proceedings. On Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday evenings, NBC will start its reports at 7 and CBS

ABC is again offering a mix of videotaped highlights and live reports from the cooventioo floor. Their coverage is to begin tonight at 10, tomorrow night at 9:30 and Wednesday and Thursday nights

Kemper Arena: Ordinary Inside, Unique Outside

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Aug. 15-The 1976 Republican National Convention will be held in Kansas City's Kemper Memorial Arena, a two-year-old, $23 million structure that defies ready architectural description but nevertheless has won major design awards.

The arena, with seats for more than 17,000 delegates, alternates and guests, rises incoogruously from the downtown river bottoms surrounding the odiferous Kansas City stockyards. It is a snowwhite sardine can, overtorned and suspended from tubular steel trusses that might be "leftovers from the Alaskan Pipeline."

That, at least, is the way some of the city's promotional literature describes tha place.

Inside, the areoa is considerably more standard io design—an oval sports pit surrounded by rows of blue seats that angle up and back all the way to the juncture of the walls and ceiling. Televisioo viewers will note little difference between the layout in Kemper Arena and that in New York's Madison Square Garden, the scene of last mooth's Democratic convention. The bunting will be the familiar red, white and blue, and on one side of the floor will be a raised rostrum flanked by buge rectangular boxes with seats and writing desks for scores of reporters.

Seating by Performance

Spread out on the floor below the rostrum will be the coovention's 2,259 delegates. The state delegations will be seated mainly in accordance with party performance, though there are to be some nods to geography.

For example, Missouri is directly below the rostrum, an obvious geographical placement. But Massachusetts. the ooly state that Richard Nixoo failed to carry in 1972, bas been tucked back in the rear of the floor, behind a dozeo other delegations and just to the side of a televisioo camera platform that juts uo from the center of the coovention

Alternate delegates will sit in the first tier of seats above the floor. Successive tiers will be occupied by some of the 6,000 newsmen accredited to the convention and the 10,000 or so "honored anchor booths for the major broadcast-ing networks will be special glass-enclosed boxes placed strategically in the upper reaches of the arena.

Because of the arena's peculiar desigo, there are no interior columns. The management-the city-boasts there are no bad aeats in the house, a bit of bragadoccio that may go unchallenged by baskethall buffs but is unlikely to hold up wheo the honored guest from Oregon finds himself farther from the convention rostrum than the honored guest from Arkansas.

Earlier Meetings

Kansas City has played host to politi-cal conventions before—the Democrats 1900, the Republicans in 1928 and Democratic "mini" conventioo in 1972. But the 1976 coovention is the first ever held in Kemper Arena, normally the home of the Kansas City Kings of the National Baskethall Association and the American Royal Livestock and Horse Show, a major annual exhibition in middle America.

The arena, named for the late R. Crosby Kemper Sr. a Kansas City civic leader and banker, lies about a mile from the center of the downtown business district and the famous old Radissoo-Muchlebach Hotel, the main Republican headquarters in coming days but a place better known for its role as Midwest White House for President Harry Truman, a Democrat.

Only two roads lead to the arena from the business district, and there is limited parking space around the hall. To bead off traffic jams, convention officials have therefore urged everyooe beaded to or from the arena to travel by cab or chartered bus.

Kansas City spent only $500,000 to prepare the arena and related balls for the convention, about a sixth of what New York spent on the Democrats.

Some of the $500,000 may be recovered. The gavel stand io the areoa is a footsquare oak timber 15 feet long. It is stood on end so that it juts up from the floor of the areoa to a convenient gaveling height next to the conventioo chairman's lectern. After the cooventioo is gaveled to a close, Kansas City's Democratic Mayor, Charles B. Wheeler Jr., will have the log cut into bundreds of pieces that areto be mounted on pewter plaquas and sold as convection memeotos for $100

Networks Face an Opportunity—and a Risk

By JOSEPH LELYVELD

Special to The New York Times KANSAS CITY, Mo., Aug. 15-The last time a oational political coovection was as closely contested as the gather-ing of Republican faithful promises to be here this week, there were only 15 million television sets in the land.

The year was 1952, and Dwight D. Eisenhower and Rubert A. Taft were the contestants in what was, in fact, the first nationally televised conventioo. Tha networks then were just experimenting with their new toys, and few viewers or pundits imagined that these experiments would substantially alter, if not altogether transform, the nature of these quadrennial rituals.

Now, with more than 175 million television sets in the land, shrewd political operatives have tended to conclude that the reality and meaning of a convention can no longer be located inside the arena but only on the tube. Having heard that the medium is the message, they reason that the impression a convention leaves on the impatient and-to judge by the ratings—generally turned-off mass audience has as much political significance as the choices it makes.

If Kansas City lives up to its advance hilling, it will be something of a throwback to the politics of the pre-electrooic era and, paradoxically, one of the best tests the news organizations of the networks have yet had in their competitive jousting and muscle-flexing on convention floors.

Ooly four years ago in Miami Beach. the Republicans achieved a oew highsome would say low-in the art of stage-managing and producing a conventioo as a televisioo spectacular. Not only the program and speeches but even the precise duration of the "spontaneous" applause closely followed a script that had been prepared long before the delegates convened. In effect, the delegates became studio extras deprived of any power of volition or choice.

Nixon as 'Artist'

The result, Norman Mailer later wrote, was a "new species of TV film" with a technical sophistication that could bear comparison to a film by Jean Luc Godard, In Mr. Mailer's analogy. the director was none other than Richard M. Nikon, who thus merited ironic recognition as a "social engineer" and the mediocre and the icert."

Jimmy Carter's image at Madison Square Garden last month, the Democrats did not quite go to those lengths, but they had four films—io effect, com-mercials for the party and its candidate -ready for showing oo television. They also had a TV consultant to insure that the coovention's themes were simple, direct and broadcast in prime time. The peculiar happenstance of a real contest in the Republican Party has meant that television consultants have had a diminished role io the productioo of their show. The novinus problem is that there are at least two potential

Nevertheless, what one Republican official called "the prime-time factor" dictates that the convention's proceedings will start just after cocktail time on its penultimate and ultimate evenings so that the millions of viewers in Eastern daylight time—an hour ahead of to him by the Republican National Com-Kansas City—will still be oo hand for mittee. speeches.

Similarly, the likelihood that a potentially hruising platform debate may occur so late Tuesday night that most television viewers will miss it may result less from a quirk in the schedule than a calculation that it might be best for the party, after all, if it were missed.

Film About Ford

If President Ford is the cominee, be will be preceded oo televisioo screens across the oation Thursday night by a film of about 15 minutes extolling his achievements in the White House, Mr. Ford's campaign organization thus takes a leaf from the strategy book of Mr. Carter, who was the star of a highly effective promotional film that was shown just before he accepted the Democratic nomination last month. Ronald Reagan, whose talents oo film need not be belabored, spurned a similar "film opportunity" when it was offered even an "artist," as "the Eisensteio of the balloting and the acceptance Ford film will end up on the cutting room floor and the cooveotioo will remain 'live."

The television consultants have not been able to do much about shaping the plot of this production, but they have been attentive to the minor details, It did not take color television to convince the parties that red, white and blue might serve nicely as the colors in the bunting on their platforms.

But ever since cnlnr televisinn's emergence, it has been important that tha shades of red and blue be selected by experts so that the flesh tones of tha nation's leaders are set off to their best advantage. The Republicans take their advice oo these matters from the same Madisoo Avenue concern the Democrats use. It is called TNT Communications, and it provided coaching on the use of Teleprompters, wardrobe advice and makeup men for 60 speakers at the Democratic coovention.

With fine impartiality, it will be offering the same Services in Kansas City this week. "It's a studied thing, it's all backstage," said TNT's president, Nathan Halpern. "The public is never aware that such care is taken."

As for the oetwork news departmeots, the Republicans promise them the kind of story they gear up to cover every four years and never really have In this there is peril as well as opportunity-the dangers of misioterpreting a devious strategem in a rules debate or of falling victim to a seosational and carefully planted rumor increase enormously in a closely contested conven-

Still, so long as the outcome can be made to appear uncertain, the ratings should benefit. The networks were said to have been disappointed with the over-all ratings for the Democratic convention. In the average mioute, when all three of them were broadcasting from the convention, there were a mere 20 million viewers, according to one calculation, and only 100 million Americans are believed to have watched at

Special to The New York Times KANSAS CITY, Mo., Aug. 15-The uncommitted delegates here are going to get very little guidance from the historians, for while there has been a factional struggle between moderates and conservatives in most Republican Presidential conventions since 1940, none has been precisely like this year's tussle be-tween President Ford and former Gov. Ronald Reagan of California.

The differences this time are fairly obvious. While no presiding President in this century has been denied his party's nomination if be really fought for it, Gerald Ford has never been elected President or Vice President.

This is something entirely new in American Presidential history and makes more reasonable Governor Reagan'a challenge. But it does not remove the widely accepted political rule that denying the nomination to a President weakens the party in power and threatens its defeat.

Only four times in the history of the Republic has a President sought and lost his party's Presidential nomination, and on three of the four occasions the successful challenger consequently lost the

•In 1852, President Millard Fillmore, a Whig, was defeated for the nomination by Winfield Scott, who in turn lost the election to Franklin Pierce, a Democrat of New Hampshire.

•In 1856, President Pierce was defeated for the Democratic nomination by James Buchanan of Pennsylvania, who defeated John C. Fremont for the Presidency. This was the only case in which a candidate not only prevailed over his own President for the nomination but went on to win.

•In 1868, President Andrew Johnson lost the nomination to Horatio Seymour, who was then defeated in the election

by Ulysses S. Grant.

• In 1884, Presideot Chester A. Arthur,

• Republican, lost his party's nomination to James G. Blaine, who was then defeated by Grover Cleveland.

Teddy Roosevelt's insurgency in 1912 did not deny William Howard Taft the Republican nomination, but it split the party and lost the election to Woodrow Wilson. Gen. Dwight D. Eisenbower challenged Robert Taft, the titular leader of the Republicans, in 1952 after a delegate scramble similar to the Ford-Reagan struggle and went on to a spectacular victory, but he was a spectacularly popular military hero and political outsider challenging a prominent Senator, not a President.

No Clear Precedents

So the Republican delegates gathered here have no clear precedents to guide them, They have only their own political commitments and prejudices, and their own judgments about wbather Ford or Reagan is more likely to defeat former

The 1952 convention, in which Eisenhower and Taft fought for the nomination, is perhaps most similar to this one

Gov. Jimmy Carter of Georgia, who has the nomination of the "majority" Democratic Party and has demonstrated considerable support among former Republican voters in the South, the horder states and the Middle West.

The 1952 Republican convention in Chicago is perhaps more similar to this Kansas City convention than any other of Repoblican conservatives, who insisted that Governor Dewey had lost twice by being too liberal in 1944 and too mild in 1948.

Beyond this conservative ideological preference for Senator Taft and Governor Reagan, the comparison between the Chicago conventioo of '52 and this week's Kansas City meeting breaks

Only four times has a President sought and lost his party's nomination of modern times, at least in the narrow margin of committed delegates at the opening gavel.

In that year, Robert Taft of Ohio, with a long and distinguished record of service in the Senate and in partisan opposition to Presidents Roosevelt and Truman, was the favorite of the party's conservatives. He had been defested for the nomioation by the Eastern wing of his party in 1940 (by Wendell L. Willkie) and in 1948 by Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York. But be retained the loyalty down. Senator Taft and General Eisenhower were much further apart oo foreign policy than are Mr. Ford and Governor Reagan, despite the latter's attacks on détente, Panama and Henry Kissinger, Mr. Reagan is much more attractive personally and even more flexlble than was Senator Taft, who once said he thought it was "dishonest to be tactful" and would probably have regarded as a dishonorable repudiation of his conservative philosophy the designation as his Vice-Presidential candidate of a liberal like Senator Richard S. Schweiker of Pennsylvania.

Also, the battle for delegates in tha 1952 convention makes the Ford-Reagan scramble look like a gentelman's courteous disagreement. It was a hrawl, the bitterest G.O.P. convention struggl since Teddy Roosevelt took his Bull-Moosers for a walk in 1912. It was carried into a vicious battle between the cootending Taft and Eisenhower delegations from the South, and into a fierce parliamentary debate over rules in the credentials committee and on the floor of the convention.

Eisenhower supporters cama into the coovention carrying banners reading "Thon Shalt Not Steal" (our delegates). The main line of their appeal was "Taft

In the end-and here was the critical difference between the '52 G.O.P. convection and this one —public opinion was clearly for General Eisenhower, not only over Seoator Taft but also over Adlal Stevenson, the Democratic nominee. Mr. Taft raised an interesting questioo: Did the Eastern wing of the Republican Party have the right to block the G.O.P. nomines while the Middle West and the West, with a little help from the South, were the main hopes of elect-

Yet while the Taft forces shouted that it was the Eisenhower "thieves" who were carrying the "Thou Shait Not Steal" hanners and accused like of hypocrisy, corruption and chicanery, this was the first national convention seen across the country on television, and Ike carried the people in the popular

A Gallup Poll at the beginning of the '52 convention, while the two men were almost as close in the delegate race as Mr. Ford and Mr. Reagan are now, showed Eisenhower winning hy a land-side over Stevenson, 59 to 31 percent, and Taft losing to Stevenson by a point, 44 to 45 percent.

The delegates here at Kansas City have no such evidence to help them decide. The polls show both candidates losing to Governor Carter as of now, and while this is likely to improve once the Republican delegates make up their the Republican delegates make up their minds, they are still stuck with a choice of risks. Do they risk dumping and in effect repudiating their own President, or do they risk everything on an attractive former Governor of California who knows all the arts of television and Hollywood?

More Serious Choice

Historically, their choice is more serious than that Once more, as in the struggles between William Howard Taft and Teddy Roosevelt; between Robert Taft and Wilkie and Dewey, and between Barry Goldwater and Nelson Rockefeller, they are going to have to decide whether to fight Carter and the Democrats primarily on conservative ideological grounds with Governor Reagan, or go with President Ford, who, though conservative, is trying to use the Presidency to put together a coalition of Republican, independent and Democratic voters.

In the last 44 years, the Democrats have occopied the White House for 28 years and the Republicans for 16—8 during the Eisenhower " presidency and 8 during the : tions of Presidents Nixon and also talked conservatively bu to moderate independents & crats. Even Governor Reagan nating the liberal Senator Sc Pennsylvania as his running conceded that his ideological narrow and must be expand 'coalition."

Thus, the delegates here are ed not only with the choice dential nominee but also with whether to concentrate on th vative ideology or organize of divergent voters with diff ologies that can defeat the coalition in November.

Henry Fairlie, the British writing in The New Republic question to the Republicans n ly: Are they an ideological or are they a political part ments," he suggests, "tend t logical; parties tend not to be cal. Movements tend to hav purpose; parties tend to have ferent purposes. Movements e for the sake of their causes defeat; parties are willing their causes to the desire to

Special to The New York Times KANSAS CITY, Mo., Aug. 15-Convention goers in search of lively bars, good restaurants, chic shops and distracting tourist sites may find Kansas City more sophisticated than they ex-

Now that jets and interstata bighways have reduced its isolation, the city can offer many of the au courant fashions and notions of New York, say, or San Francisco as well as the steak and jazz for which it bas always been known.

Food and Drink

Much chauvinistic prose has been written about the Kansas City strip steak. It is the same cut as a New York strip and tastes the same, in either city. out there is a certain gastronomical nystique about eating beef in one of the world's most famous beef towns. Convention goers aeeking the ultimate experience should head for the Golden ox, a rustic steak bouse just across the treet from the convention arena and vithin sight—as well as smell—of the lansas City stockyards. The Ox, which ells a 13-ounce strip for $7.70, with otato salad and garlic toast, does not ave a wine list that does justice to its

For effete elegance in dining, con-ntiongoers should head for the Amerm Restaurant at Crown Center, the pristic urban development just south the central business district. This is a ice of shining silver and crystal, with New Orleans carpetbag steak (stuffed th oysters) that goes for $10.75, a la

There are a few Kansas City residents o contend that the very best food in vn is served not in a ateakhouse or becue joint or even in the elegant wwn Center but in a little Chinese resrant tucked away in a suburban pping center about 15 minutes south downtown. It is the Princess Gar-, and it merits serious investigation 'nr watering spots, the Radisson-

And if convention sessions drag into the wee hours, delegates will discover, unhappily, that the booze stops flowing in Missouri at I:30 A.M.

Desperate delegates must go to pri-vate clubs just across the river in Kansas. Bartenders there serve until 3 A.M. anyone willing to pay a modest cover charge to become a "member."

Night Life

Visitors who want to get away from the convention scene after dark can hop into cabs and in 5 or 10 minutes reach other hot spots in auch sections of town as River Quay and Westport.

Good bets at River Quay, a $1.50 cab ride north of the Muehlebach, are Ebenezar's for drinks and Papa Nick's for late-snack omelettes and fine jazz piano. Mnehlebach, offers the open-air court-yard of the Prospect (drinks and snacks) and the New Stanley, probably the most popular over-30 bar in town.

Shopping

Convention goers who want to shop for clothing or gifts will find that downtown Kansas City, like most downtowns, offers little these days. The hest shopping is found south of downtown at Crown Center and Country Club Plaza,

Culture

Convention goers with a penchant for quiet leisure will find Kansas City's Nelson Gallery, near Country Club Plaza, a world-class museum with an exceptionally fine Far Eastern collection.

The Truman Library in nearby Independeoce is a nostalgic treat, even if It does tout a Democratic past. It is best Westport, a $3 cab ride south of the reached by private car, however.

steers down in the stockyards, hard by the coovention arena, but most of the cattle auctions are held in the rural towns where the feed lots have moved, and of the 13 major packing plants that onca operated bere, only two remain

The Kansas City of 1976 also bears little resemblance to the Kansas City in which Republicans gathered in 1928 to nominate Herbert Hoover, the eventual wioner, to run against Alfred E. Smith. The city then was swinging into its wildest era—the deys of speakeasy graft and iron-fisted political rula by Tom Pendergast, more familiarly known as 'Boss Tom."

Today's Kansas City is lively, but by no means wild.
"Increasingly sophisticated is a more appropriate description of the new city," says Nancy Parks, the author of "Getting It Together io Kansas City," a recently published guide. A tour of Kansas City discloses an urban landscape that is not flat and parched, as the myth has it, but rolling and leafy.

Much of the downtown architecture is undistinguished, worn and in need of replacement. But to steal from that facetious old musical cliché, everything is up to date in Kansas City's new struc-tures, particularly Kemper Arena, the convention hall, and Crown Center; The arena has been hailed by leading architects as a "21st-century colosseum" because of its futuristically functional design. Municipal officials hope to use it as a drawing card to make Kansas City a major American convention center, Crown Center is a modernistic collection of office buildings, apartments, sbops, restaurants and a hotel that is serving as President Ford's convention headquarters.

Pockets of Renovation

Here and there around Kansas City, a number of old residential and business areas are being renovated. Trendy houtiques and singles bars are moving ioto the refurbished structures, creating an ambience reminiscent of restored areas in Washington, D.C., and Ssn Francisco.

Perhaps the city's most serious problem at this point is its deteriorating school system. Blacks, who in 1972 made up 22.1 percent of the city's population, cannot agree with whites on a desegregation plan.

If the controversy drags on for years, it could seriously slow the city's momentum. In that regard, too. everything's up to date in Kansas City.

and-recession-burdened election of 1974 to just a third of the House of Representatives. They have also been losing their foundation stones in state and local politics. Republicans of all stripes hold only 13 of tha 50 Governorships. Republicans control both branches of state legislatures only in Vermont, North Dakota, Kansas and Idaho. In only eight other states do they lead a single branch of the legislature.

Weakened as they are, the establishmentarians still argue that they live where Republicans have traditionally lived and prospered. Prosaic as it sometimes sounds, they say they know more than the movement Republicans do about the business of getting elected.

in harness together, all the regions, wings, movements and establishments of the Republican Party might not be enough to defeat bungry, united Democrats this year. But on the sort of collision course they have marked out in Kansas City, the Republican fragments look capable of wounding each other severely and perhaps of destroying the

On both sides of the battle there are gloomy partisans who suspect that the Republican Party's time is up. A substantial segment of the Reagan cam-paign believed all along that a third-party campaign would have been more party campaign would have been more promising than the effort to unite the Republican factions and redeem the party's history. And at the Republican National Committee, the establishment headquarters, Eddie Mahe, the party's executive director, laments the "negatives, negatives, negatives" that cling to the party's name—Watergate, Richard Nixon and before them the improve of Nixon and, before them, the imagery of privilege and big business. Mr. Mahe wondered aloud the other day, "whether the bias out there is so great against this party that we've got to reconsti-tute it under some other flag."

The Georgia Model

Accordingly, it has become fashionable in some quarters to foresee not only a Carter-Mondale Democratic landslide this fall, but also the effective collapse of two-party competition in much of the country. The model of political life in the future, some observers believe, may be the one-party (or no-party) system that Jimmy Carter knew as Governor of Georgia. An overwhelmingly Democratic Congress (like the overwhelmingly Democratic Georgia legislature) would become divided into pro-Carter and anti-Carter factions, the theory goes. The functional oppositioo would form not around the dwindliog Republican minority hut around unhappy Democrats-hypothetically around an urban, ethnic and labor coalition if the Democratic President did not move effectively against un-

Government That Works

What we now have is a government organization that doesn't make any sense. It has not developed by design. It just grew-by whim, bureeucratic fightiog, and the caving in of Democrat Congresses to speciel-interest demands. So today we find that nine Federal departments and 20 independent agencies are involved in education; seven departments and eight agencies in health; Federal recreation areas are edmloistered by six agencies in three departments, and so forth.

What we need is a top-to-bottom nverhaul.

Citizens are demanding the end to the rapid and wasteful increase in the size of Washington government. All steps must be taken to insure that unnecessary Federal agencies and programs are eliminated and that Congress carefully scrutinize the total hudget of esch agency. If it is determined that sunset laws and zero-based budgeting can accomplish these ends then they will have our support. Washington programs must be made as cost-effective as those in the states and localities.

A Safe and Just Society

Fighting crime is-and should beprimarily a local responsibility.

The Federal Criminal Code should include automatic and mandatory minimum sentences for persons committing offenses under Federal jurisdiction that involve the use of a dangerous weapon; that involve exceptionally serious crimes, such as trafficking in herd drugs, kidnapping, and aircraft hijacking, and that involve injuries committed by repeat offenders.

We support the right of citizens to keep and bear arms. We oppose Federal registration of firearms, Mandatory sentences for crimes committed wih a lethal weapon are the only effective solution to this problem.

Terrorism - both dnmestic and international - must be stopped. Not only must the strongest steps be taken in the United States, but collective action must come from all nations. Deterring every form of hijacking calls for sanctions against countries that aid terrorists. The world community should take appropriate action to deal with terrorist organizations. We appleud the daring rescue by Israel of innocent civilian hostages who were kidnapped hy terrorists. While we regret that loss of life was involved the courageous

. Education

Our children deserve quality educa-

We believe that segregated schools are morally wrong and unconstitutional. However, we oppose forced busing to achieve racial balances in our schools. We believe there are educational advantages for children in attending schools in their own neighborhoods and that the Democrat-controlled Congress has failed to enact legislation to protect this concept. The racial composition of many schools results from decisions by people about where they choose to live. If Congress continues to fail to act, we would favor consideration of an amendment to the Constitution forbidding the assignment of children to schools on the basis of race.

We favor consideration of tax credits for parents making elementary and secondary school tuition payments.

Local communities wishing to conduct nonsectarian prayers in their public schools should be able to do so. We favor a constitutional amendment to achieve this end. Responsibility for education, particularly on the elementary and secondary levels, belongs to local communities and parents. Intrusion by the Federal Government must be avoided. Bureaucratic control of schools by Washington bas the potential for destruction of our educational system by taking more and more decisions away from parents and local school authorities. Financial dependence on the Federal Government mevitably leads to greater centralization of authority. We believe, therefore, that a study should be authorized concerning funding of elementary and secondary education, coupled with a study regarding return to the states of equivalent revenue to compensate for any loss in present levels of Federal funding.

Health

We support extension of catastrophiciliness protection to all who cannot obtain it. We should utilize our private health insurance system to assure adequate protection for those who do not have it. Such an approach will eliminate the red tape and high bureaucratic costs inevitable in a comprehensive national program.

The Republican Party opposes compulsory national health insurance.

While we support valid medical and biological research efforts which can produce life-saving results, we oppose any research on live fetuses. We are also opposed to any legislation which sauctions ending the life of any patient.

Equal Rights and Ending Discrimination

There must be vigorous enforcement and reduced tax rates. While of lews to assure equal treatment in job ax reform is tax reduction, recruitment, hiring, promotion, pay, ze the need for structural tax credit, mortgage access and housing.

State Senator Charles Pickering, left, of Mississippi, chairman of the Human Rights Subcommittee of the Republican Platform Committee, counting votes for the equal rights ameodment last week. Those against won the vote when the subcommittee decided not to take a position on the issue.

The way in end discrimination, however, is not by resurrecting the much discredited qunta system and attempting to cloak it in an aura of new respectability. Rather, we must provide alternative means of assisting the victims of past discrimination to realize their full worth as American citizens.

Wiping out past discrimination requires continued emphasis on providing educational opportunities for minority citizens, increasing direct and guaranteed loans to minority business enterprises, and affording qualified minority persons equal opportunities for government positions at all levels.

Wnmen

The Republican Party reaffirms its support for ratification of the equal rights ameodment. Our party was the first national party to endorse the E.R.A. in 1940. We continue to believe its ratification is essential to insure equal rights for all Americans. In our 1972 platform, the Republican Party recognized the great contributions women have made to society as homemakers and mothers, as contributors to the community through volunteer work, and es members of the labor force in careers. The platform stated then, and repeats now, that the Republican Party 'fully endorses the principle of equal rights, equal opportunities and equal responsibilities for women." The equal rights amendment is the embodiment of this principle and therefore we support its swift ratification.

The question of abortion is one of the most difficult and controversial of our time. It is uodoubtedly a moral and personal issue, but it also involves complex questions relating to medical scleoce and criminal justice. There are those in our party who favor complete support for the Supreme Court decision which permits abortion on demand. There are others who share sincere convictions that the Supreme Court's decision must be changed by a constitutional amendment prohibiting all abortions. Others have yet to take a posttion, or they have assumed a stance somewhere in between polar positions.

We protest the Supreme Court's iotrusion loto the family structure through its depial of the parents' obligation and right to guide their minor children. The Republican Party favors a continuance of the public dialogue on abortion and supports the efforts of those who seek enactment of a constitutional amendment to restore protection of the right to life for unborn children.

Working Americans

Free collective bargaining remains the best way to insure that American workers receive a fair price for their labors.

The special problems of collective bargaining in state and local government should be addressed at those levels. Washington should not impose its standards on local governments. While we appose strikes by public employees, we recognize that states have the right to permit them if they choose.

Union membership as a condition of employment has been regulated by state law under Section 14(b) of the Taft-Hartley Act. This basic right should continue to be determined by the states.

Among the rights that are the entitlement of every American worker is the right to join a union-large, small nr independent; the right to be protected against racial discrimination and misuse of dues; the right to union elections that are fair and democratic, and the right to be assured of ultimately receiving his or her promised pension ben-

Welfare Reform

The following goals should govern the reform of the welfare system: (1) Provide adequate living standards for the truly needy; (2) end welfare fraud and prevent it in the future with emphasis on removing ineligible recipients from the welfare rolls, tightening food stamp eligibilty requirements, and ending aid to filegal aliens and the voluntarily unemployed; (3) strengtheo work requirements, particularly directed at the productive involvement of ablebodied persons in useful community work projects; (4) provide educational and vocational incentives to allow recipients to become self-supporting; (5) better coordinate Federal efforts with local and state social welfare agencies and strengthen local and state administrative functions. We oppose federalizing the welfare system; local levels of government are most aware of the needs of their communities. Consideration should be given to a range of options in financing the programs to assure that state and local responsibilities are met. We also oppose the guaranteed annual income concept or any programs that reduce the incentive to work. Those features of the present law, particularly the food stamp program, that draw into assistance programs people who are capable of paying for their own needs should he corrected. The humanitarian purpose of such pro- grams exceeded ours in investment by grams must not be corrupted by eligibility loopholes.

A National Urban Strategy Without an urban policy, the Democrat-controlled Congress has created e hodgepodge of programs which have all but destroyed our once vital cities. At the same time, urban crime rates have skyrocketed and the quality and promise of metropolitan education systems have plummeted. All this has appened during the years that the number of Federal urban programs has increased almost tenfold: from 45 in 1946 to 435 in 1968; and expenditures have increased 3,000 perceot: from '$1 billion to $30 billion.

Federal, state and local government resources combined are not enough to solve our urban problems. The private sector must be the major participant. Economic development is the best way to involve business and industry: government support should emphasize capital formation and technical assistance for small eod minority businesses.

Energy

The Democrats proposed to dismember the American oil industry. We vigorously oppose such divesture of oil companies—a move which would surely result lo higher energy costs, inefficiency and undercapitalization of the iodustry.

Democrats have elso proposed that the Federal Government compete with industry in energy development hy creating a national oil company. We totally oppose this expensive, inefficient and wasteful intrusion into an area which is best bandled by private enterprise,

Environment and Natural Resources

One of this nation's greatest assets has been our ahundant netural resources, which have made possible our strong economic and strategic role in the world. We still have a wealth of resources hut they are not of inficite quantity. We must recognize that our stem from what we grow in the soil, take from the sea, or extract from the ground. We bave a responsibility to future generations to conserve our nonrenewable natural resources. Consistent with our needs, conservation should remain our national

The vast land holdings of the Federal Government - approximately one-third of our nation's area-are the lands from which much of our future production of minerals must come. Public lands must be maintained for multiple use manegement where such uses are compatible. Public land areas should nnt be closed to exploration for mioerals or for mining without an overriding national interest.

We also believe that Americans are realistic and recognize that the emphasis on environmental concerns must be brought into basince with the needs for industrial and economic growth so that we can continue to provide jobs for an ever-growing work force.

Fiscal Responsibility

As Republicans, we are proud that in this platform we have urged tax reductions rather than increased government spending. With firm restraint on Federal spending this platform pledges that its proposals for tax change reductions, structural adjustments, differentials, simplificationa and job-producing incentives—can all be achieved within the balanced Federal hudgets we also demand as vital to the interests of all Americans. Without such spending restraint, we cannot responsibly cut back taxes. We reaffirm our determination that any net reduction of revenues must be offset by reduced government spending.

Foreign Policy, National Defense and International Economic Policy

National Defense

A superior national defense is the fundamental condition for a secure America and for peace and freedom for the world. Military strength is the path to peace. A sound foreign policy must be rooted in a superior defense capability, and both must be perceived as a deterrent to aggression and aupportive of nur national interests.

The American people expect that their leaders will assure a national defense posture second to none. They know that planning for our national security must be a joint effort by the President and Congress. It cannot be the subject of partisan dispute. It should not be held hostage to domestic adventurism...

A minimum guarantee to preserve freedom and insure against blackmail and threats, and in the face of growing Soviet military power, requires a period of sustained growth in our defense effort. In constant dollars, the present defense budget will not more than match the defense budget of 1964, the year before a Democratic Administration involved America so deeply in the Vietnam war. In 1975 Soviel defense pro-

$5 percent, exceeded ours in operating costs by 25 percent, and exceeded ours in research and development by 66 percent. The issue is whether our forces will be adequate to future challeoges. We say they must be.

Our national defense will include the continuation of the major modernization program for our strategic missile and bomber forces, the development of a oew and intercontinental ballistic missile, a new missile-launching submarine force and a modern homber — the B-1 - capable of penetrating the most sophisticated air defenses of the 1980's. These elements will comprise a deterrent of the first order.

Our Navy, the guarantor of freedom nf the seas, must have e major ahipbuilding program, with an adequete balance betwen nuclear and .nonnuclear ships. The composition of the fleet must be based on a realistic assessment of the threat we face, and must assure that no adversary will gaio naval superiority.

An important modernization program for our tactical air forces is under way. We will require new fighters and interceptor aircraft for the Air Force, Nevy and Marines. As a necessary component of our long-range strategy, we will produce and deploy the B-I bomber in timely manner, allowing us to retain air superiority.

Our investments in military research and development are of great importance to our future defense capabilities. We must not lose the vital momentum.

As a vital component of our overall national security posture, the United States must bave the best intelligence system in the world. The effectiveoess of the iotelligence community must be restored, consonant with the reforms instituted by President Ford. We favor the creation of an independent oversight function by Coogress and we will withstand partisan efforts to turn any part of our iotelligence system ioto a political football. We will take every precaution to prevent the breakdown of security controls on sensitive intelligence information, andangering the lives of U.S. officials abroad, or affecting the ability of the President to act expeditiously whenever legitimate foreign policy and defense needs require

NATO and Eurnpe

The economic strength of Western Europe has increased to the point where our NATO partners can now assume a larger share of the common defense; in response to our urgiog, our allies are demonstrating a greater willingness to do so. This is not the time to recommeod a uoilateral reduction of American military forces lo Europe. We will, however, pursue the balanced reduction of forces in both Western and Eastern Europe, based on agreements which do not jeopardize the security of the alliance.

Some of our NATO allles have experienced rapid and dynamic changes. We are encouraged by developments in the Iberian peniosule, where both Portugal and Spain now face more promising futures. Early consideration should be given to Spain's accession to the North Atlantic Treaty Organiza-

plicans assum office in 1969, we were confronted with a war in Vietnam involving more than 500,000 U.S. troops, and to which we had committed billioos of dollars and our national honor and prestige. It was in the spirit of bipartisan support for Presidential foreign policy initiatives, inaugurated in the postwar era by Senator Arthur Vandenberg, that most Republicans supported the United States commitment to assist South Vietnam resist Communist-sponsored aggressinn. The human cost to us was great; more than 55,000 Americans died in that conflict, and more than 300,000 were wounded.

A policy of patient, persistent and principled negotiations extricated the United States from that ill-fated war with the expectation that peace would prevail. The refusal of the Democratcontrolled Congress to give support to Presidential requests for military aid to the beleaguered nations of South Vietnam, Cambodia and Laos, coupled with sustained military assaults by the Communists in gross violation of the Paris peace accords, brought about the collapse of those nations and the subjugation of their people to totalitarian

We recognize that there is a wide divergence of opinion concerning Viet-nam, but we pledge that American troops will never again be committed for the purpose of our own defense, or the defense of those to whom we are committed by treaty or other solemn agreement, without the clear purpose of achieving nur stated diplomatic and military objectives.

United States-Chinese Relations

A development of significance for the future of Asia and for the world came to fruition in 1972 as our communications were restored with the People'a Republic of China. This event has allowed us to initiete dialogue with the leaders of a quarter of the earth's population and trade channels with the People's Republic have been opened, leading to benefits for each aide.

Our friendly relations with one great power should not be construed as a challenge to any other nation, large or small. The United States Government. while engaged in a normalization of reletions with the People's Republic of China, will continue to support the freedom and independence of our friend and ally, the Republic of China, and its 16 million people. The United States will fulfill and keep its commitments, such as the mutual defense treaty with the Republic of China.

The Americas

The present Penama Canal treaty provides that the United States has jurisdictional rights in the Canal Zone as "if it were the sovereign." The United States intends that the Panama Canal be preserved as an international waterwey for the ships of all nations. This secure eccess is enhanced by a relationship which commands the respect of Americans and Panamanians and benefits the people of both countries. In any you.

talks with Panama, bowever, the United States negotiators should m no way cede, dilute, forfeit, negotiate or transfer any rights, power, authority, jurisdiction, territory or property that are oecessary for the protection and security of the United States and the entire Western Hemisphere.

The Middle East

Our commitment to Israel Is fundamental and enduring. We have honored and will continue to honor that commitment io every way — politically, economically end by providing the military aid that Israel requires to remain atrong enough to deter any potential aggression. Forty percent of all United States aid that Israel has received since its creation io 1948 has come in the last two fiscal yeers, as a result of Republican initiatives. Our policy must remain one of decisive support for the security and integrity of Israel.

An equally important component of our commitment to Israel lies in continuing our efforts to secure a just aoo durable peace for all nations in that complex region. Our efforts bave succeeded, for the first time since the creation of the state of Israel, in moving toward a negntiated peace settlement which would serve the interests and the security of all nations in the Middle East. Peace in the Middle East now requires face-to-face, direct negotiations between the states involved with the recognition of safe, secure and defensible borders for Israel.

Africa

We support all forces which promote negotiated settlements and racial peace. We shall continue to deplore all vio-leoce and terrorism and to urge all concerned that the rights of tribal, sthnic and racial minorities be guaranteed through workable safeguards. Our policy is to strengthen the forces of moderatioo, recognizing that solutions to African problems will oot come quickly. The peoples of Africa can coexist io security, work together in freedom and harmony, and strive together to secure their prosperity. We hope that the Organization of African Unity will be able to achieve mature and stable relationships withio Africa and abroad.

United States-Soviet Relations

Our trade in nonstrategic areas. creates jobs here at home, substantially improves our balance-of-payments position, and can contribute to an improved political climate in the world. The overseas sale of our agricultural products benefits American fermers and consumers. To guerd against eny sudden shift in domestic prices as the consequence of unannounced purchases, we have instituted strict reporting procedures and other treaty safeguards. We shall not permit concessional sales of agricultural products to the Soviet nioo, nor shell we permit the Soviet Unioo or others to determine our agricultural policies by irregular and unpredictable purcheses.

Our relations with the Soviet Union will be guided by solid principles. We will maintain our strategic and conventlonal forces; we will oppose the deployment of Soviet power for unilateral advantages or political and territorial expansion; we will never tolerate a shift against us in the strategic balance, and we will remain firm in pressure, while et the same time expressing our williogness to work on the basis of strict reciprocity toward new agreements which will belp echieve peace and stability.

International Cooperation

The United States should promptly. withdraw from the International Labor Organization if that body fails to stop its increasing pollticization.

We favor an extension of the territorial sea from three to 12 miles, and we favor in principle the creation of 2 200-mile economic zone in which coastal states would have exclusive rights. to explore and develop natural resources. We strongly condemn illegal corporate payments made at home and abroad. To eliminate illegal payments to foreign officiala hy American corporations, we support passage of President Ford's proposed legislation and the O.E.C.D. declaration on investment setting forth reasonable guidelines for business conduct.

International Economic Policy

The Republican Administration will cooperate fully in strengthening the international trade end monetary system, which provides the foundation for our prosperity and that of all nations. We shall bargain hard to remove barriers to an open economic system, and we sball oppose new restrictions to trade. We shall continue to represent vigorously our nation's economic interests in the trade negotiations taking place in Geneva, guard against protectionism, and insist that the principles of fair trade be scrupulously observed. When industries and jnbs are adversely affected by foreign competition, adjustment assistance under the Trade Act of 1974 is made available. This ect must he under continuous review to ascertain that it reflects changing circumstances.

Conclusion

The American people can be proud of our netion's achievements in foreign policy over the past eight years.

We are et peace. We are strong.

We re-emphasize the importance of our ties with the nations of the Americas. Our relations with allies in the Atlan-

Betsy Bloomingdale was impressed and Barbara Walters was downright dazzled.

"I wasn't sure what I was getting into," said Mr. Zip-kin, the New York real estate heir. "I've been up at the Olympics with the (Mick) Jaggers and out in Beverly Hills with Ronnie and Nancy (Raagan) just oozing charm out of every pore. I hrought

A Dispassionate Rivalry With a huge early lead in the public-opinion polls, the Democratic ticket represented a formidable obstacle unless the Ford and Reagan forces could manage somehow, after the Kansas City fray, to get their party's act together.

Kenowledged that they were trying to keep matters cool because their prospects depended on a nomination decision that would be intellectual, not emotional.

Perhaps most significantly, several of the Ford partisans pointed out that premature dispute of Mr. Ford's preferred. party's act together.

Mr. Ford and Mr. Reagan stormed through the Republican primaries like bull elephants fighting to dominate the herd. They questioned each other's capacity to govern, they debated both fundamentals and frills of foreign and domestic policies and they dealt, albeit, spasmodically, in some exchanges of hostile political rhetoric.

Anyone" as a Vice-Presidential possibility, said former Gov. Winfield Dunn, a Ford ally from Tennessee, As a minority party, be said, "we can't afford that luxury."

In addition, well-positioned Ford aides said privately that one of several "options" under consideration, if the convention delegates should adopt the rule change and force the President to name a running mate, would to name Mr. Reagan. It was not yet clear if the tactic would, under the proposed new rule, be technically possible,

Principals on either side acted as if almost uncoocerned with the platform language. The only fuss stirred over the draft was the consequence of arguments raised by those oo the hard right side of the Reagan camp, ideologues who were said to be beyond the candidate's control. Why, for instance, had not Mr. Reagan's managers fought vigorously to include io the draft their man's insistence on retention of American control over the Panama Canal? John P. Calling his inclusion on the Ford list "incredible," he accued the President's people of "wishful thinking" and avowed that he hadn't "spoken to them in a week."

Actually, Mr. Tauke was chosen on a Ford slate at the Iowa convention in June, but he insists that those who sent him to that session from his own district have known all along that he was basically uncommitted. Insisting that he could justi-fy his current uncommitted status because he was certain that he could have been elected from his own district as easily as a Reagan delegate as he was on the Ford slate, he conceded that local political considerations bad been appermost in his mind from the beginning.

"My first perception," he said, "and I guess that no longer holds, was that if Reagan was the candidate I percent of the families who are United Auto Workers and another 15 percent who be-long to other unions."

However, he has since decided from soundings in his predominantly Roman Catholic district, where be is running for re-election to his second term in the state legislature, that Mr. Reagan, who favors a constitutional amendment making abortions illegal except where the life of the mother is at stake, might run stronger in November than Mr. Ford, who believes such laws should be left to the states.

"Obviously, I'd like a candidate who'd run reasonably well," he explained. Mr. Tauke has received telephone calls from Mr. Reagan and from Elliott-L. Richardson, the Secretary of Commerce, whom Mr. Tauke readily impressed him in a "rather intimate" 40-minuta conversavolunteers would be his real tion, especially because "he did a very good job of ex-plaining his views and he did first choice for President if he were a candidate.

"Absolutely not," he said in a firm, clear voice.

Mr. Connally, who was acquitted by a Federal court jury of charges of impropriety involving price increases sought by a milk-producing association, is being considered by President Ford as one of a list of several Vice-Presidential possibilities. Mr. Connally confirmed today that he had received a questionnaire about his background prepared by the White House staff.

But, although he said he had not sought the Vice-Presidential and sought the Vice-Presidential nomination, he added he was "not going to say I would refuse to accept it" because to do so would show "both presumption and arrogance."

The news conference today might be a preview of the intense scrutiny that Mr. Connally's controversial past might bring if he were nominated. He said at one point that he had no knowledge of a report that Leon Jaworski, the former watergate special prosecutor, had declined to furnish infor-

"Senator, you want to go over and say something to Rocky?" an assistant to Mr. Helms asked. "Well, now," the North Carolinan drawled, "I just don't believe I do." Their chilly estrangement in an otherwise cordial room seemed to underscore one of the incongruities of the 1976 Republican National Convention—the absence of overt philosophical tensions except at the edges of the party.

"Now listeo," the well-dressed fellow outside the Alameda Plaza Hotel was saying to Michael O'Connor. "What really matters is timing. Timing. That's the impor-tant thing."

Mr. O'Connor, a member of a group called Youth for Reagan, was perched on the side of an outdoor fountain crammed with 2,000 helium-filled ballooos held, earthbound by a net.

"Now when the Governor arrives," the other man said, glancing at his clipboard, "you cut this rope and then this one. Got that?"

"Right, I've got it," he said.

Open letter to President Ford from 76 United States Congressmen of both parties denounces Mexico's slide to communism under President Echeverria.

Reprinted from Congressional Record August 10, 1976, Page E4499

August 10, 1976

Congress of the United States House of Representatives Mashington, 3.C. 20515

Hon. Gerald R. Ford President The White House Washington, D.C.

Dear Mr. President:

On May fifth, thirty Members of Congress expressed to you their concern over the trend of political developments in Mexico, asking whether the Secretary of State was, in fact, keeping you adequately informed. A response to this letter has been received; but there still appear to be

Since the fourteenth of April, at least thirty-five excerpts from the Mexican press have been substantial points of disagreement. inserted in the Congressional Record, in a sincere effort to illustrate points of concern, and to provide the documentation which critics invariably demand - and invariably ignore.

It would be interesting to learn what favorable interpretation can be placed upon the

(1) The amnesty recently provided for hundreds of Soviet agents who provided leadership for the bloody events of 1968, when hundreds of Mexicans were killed in summer-long disturbances. (2) The placement of at least a thousand non-Mexican Communists and radicals in key

(3) The Mexican government's drive to increase political, economic, and "cultural" ties with government and journalistic positions in Mexico.

(4) The dismissal, by President Echeverria, of waves of terrorist attacks as mere "diversion" every Communist nation on earth.

and "provocations" which are not the fault of self-proclaimed leftist revolutionaries. (5) The recent changes in the Mexican Constitution to cut away the legal basis of private

(6) The recent introduction of Castroite textbooks, for compulsory use in all Mexican schools. (7) The persistent employment of Communist, rhetoric, anti-American demagoguery, and calls for domestic class warfare from the highest Mexican officials. (8) Government inaction in the face of thousands of land seizures taking place all across Mexico, often by armed gangs under non-Mexican leadership. (9) Open declarations that collectivization of the countryside is the government's goal, combined with heavy government pressure on the rural population to join collectives.

Surely we are not expected to overlook the lesson of Cuba, when all our official "experts" and media pundits assured us that Fidel Castro had oo intention of imposing Communism upon the Cuban people. As a result, the Cubans were enslaved, except for one Cuban in ten who escaped to the United States, and a Soviet base has been implanted ninety miles from Florida.

The present one-party government of Mexico is following a similar path. For moral and humanitarian reasons alone, we should prefer not to see 65 million Mexicans forced to choose between slavery and exile. And for overwhelmingly important strategic reasons, we should prefer not to see what some Mexican writers can already visualize - a Cactus Curtain along the Rio

For all these reasons and more, we ask your assurance that the developing situation in Mexico is receiving the deep attention which it merits.

Sincerely,

Sponsor and Manager

William Sipos, the 31-yearold sponsor and manager of Bend N' Elbow said at one point 'The fog was so thick for three and one balf hours that you couldn't see the ball." Mr. Sipos pitched 190 innings. Harris Gordon, 34, a funeral director who manages Geger's Diner, said when the weather turned bad "the lightning was dancing around in the outfield."

The game was nonstop under the lights at Somerville Field. Players slept and rested on the grass, under the grandstands in cars and anywhere they could find shelter. Thousands of spectators also braved the bad weather. Heevy rain fell at 4 P.M. as the last out was being made and the teams began congratweting each other.

At 3:30 P.M. today, with 53 and a half hours played, the rain began to fall again, but players and about 350 fans stayed on. The game started Friday at 10 A.M.

When the long fog lifted at 3:30 A.M. yesterday, Gager's was ahead by seven runs. Before the fog, Bend N' Eloow led by 45 runs.

The funds were raised for the Community General Hospital and for the construction of a new softball field.

One spectator called the event "a middle American Woodstock." The famed Woodstock, site of a rock concert, is a few miles from Monticello.

Doctor at Lincoln: Story of Disilla

cal centers. But be said, like many of the young medical students whose social and political outlook was fashioned by the civil rights and peace movements, he decided not to stay . in the "ivory tower."

Instead, he responded to a campaign for pediatric interns and residents that had been mounted by a group of activist young doctors at Lincoln who bad hopes of forming a "critical mass" to work for revolutionary changes in medical care for the poor.

They wanted, for example, to effect some "meaningful community control of the hospital workers inside, as well as by the people who used the hospital daily.

Frustrations Cited But now, after six years, despite a new $200 million facility with three times the capacity, the frustrations have proved too much. The daily frustrations, as well as the changing nature of the struggle—from aiming for radical changes to merely surviving in a failing institution-bave led Dr. Carison to give up his post and take a job as an attending physician in the Department of Medicine at Albert Einstein College of Medicine and its family-care clinic in the North Bronx.

The resolution of conflict in self is like the making one of opposites in art.—Eli Siegel, 1941

The Aesthetic Realism of Eli Siegel Is True

-From the Advertising Committee of Aestbetic Realism

ADVERTISEMENT

The Advertising Committee of Aesthetic Realism represents the students and teachers of Aestheoe Realism; and also many people all over the country who have come to see that Aesthetic Realism is true and needed.

Aesthetic Realism was founded in 1941 by Eli Siegel. Aesthetic Realism, from the beginning, was a way of seeing the world, questioning an earlier way a person might have.

As the years went on, despite disadvantages, Aesthetic Realism seemed convincing to people, various enough to represent people in general. We might mentinn Carrie Lois Wilson of Philadelphia, Barnard College, 1966; Chaim Koppelman, printmaker, teacher at the School of Visual Arts; Arnold Perey, reacher of anthropology, Ph.D., Columbia University; Gary Krakauer, Johns Hopkins University, 1967; Ted van Griethuysen, University of Texas, Fulhright scholar;

Rebecca Thompson, M.A., Penn State University; William Atherton, actor. Carnegie Institute of Technology, 1969; Nancy Starrels of Chicago, University of Iowa, 1943; Sheldon Kranz, University of Iowa, 1943; Barbara Davison, Bennington College, 1958; Lois Mason, teacher, State University of New York at New Paltz, 1969; Marc Loonan, teacher, City University of New York, 1975; Edward Palumbo, Ph.D., University of Michigan, Fulbright Lecturer; Marilyn Enderby, Indiana University, 1967; Norman Freeman, D.D.S., New York University.

It has been hard for many persons, including those in charge of public information, to believe that a new thing in education has taken place. Certainly there was no desire to feel that one's education was incomplete. This has been a sad hindrance to general awareness of Aesthetic Realism.

Meanwhile, there have been hundreds of persons who have come to believe that Aesthetic Realism is true, not because they were unusual of because they were easily persuaded; it was because they used their best judgment and were careful of their lives. The sentiment of those who feel that Aesthetic Realism adds to science and art in America is explained and strengthence hy the letter of William Carlos Williams which precedes Hat Afternaans Have Been in Montana: Poems by Eli Siegel. Dr. Williams wrote:

I say definitely that that single poem, out of a thousand others written in the past quarter century, secures our place in the cultural world.

Significant, too, of the value of Aesthetic Realism and the meaning of Eli Siegel is the fact that 158 people-students and consultants of Aesthetic Realism, and others toowere impelled to contribute the cost of this advertisement. For the purpose of having the American people truly understand Aesthetic Realism, we asked Eli Siegel to write an Outline of Aesthetic Renlism, which follows.

An Outline of Aesthetic Realism by Eli Siegel

atest inward danger of man is his giv-contempr as a means of establishing ersonality. Contempt can be defined ning of what is different from oneself as a means of self-increase as one sees it. This tendency is seen by Aesthetic Realism as the cause of insanity and of general mental disorder. The details of what I have just said can be seen in the last thirty numbers of The Right of Aesthetic Realism to Be Known, the newsletter at this time generally called TRO.

6. Homosexuality Is Based on Contempt Homosexuality has arisen often from a son's contempt for the way a mother showed "love" to him. This contempt, based on an easy conquest of mother, changed to a contempt for and a deep indifference to women. That love was had on such easy terms encouraged likewise a contempt for what was different from oneself-that is, the world. The work of Consultaoon With Three, one of the Aesthetic Realism consultation trios, has made for a change in about a hundred homosexual persons. This should be verified as fairly as can be.

7. Education Is for Liking the World Since the purpose of life itself is to like the world as much as can be, it is clear that education in all its diversity is for the purpose of liking the world.

8. The Family Begins Wrong

The family should be the first point in the liking of the world; but it most often is a substitute for the world, in which members have simultaneously contempt for each other, too much devotion to each other, and unfairness to evetyone else.

9. Religion Likes the Cause of the World The tendency of all religion is to see something of a personal cause for the world. This personal eause is seen as God in Judaism, Christianity, Mohammedanism. The seeing of the cause of the world as personal is poeric and has much truth in it. The world, though, as Aestheric Realism sees it, is always both personal and impersonal. Christ is one of the great sceings by man of reality as intimately personal and as immeasurably impersonal.

10. Humor Is with Religion

The purpose of religion, which is the pleased seeing of God in everything that takes place, is akin ro that of bumor. Humor, while accepting the nncomely, the awry, the unhandsome, shows that it can be thought of gracefully. When the ugly is seen gracefully, there can be that release familiar to man called laughter. God is the cause of form in bumor, too.

11. Poetry Is Sanity

Poetry is logic and emotion brought together so' well, music ensues. Sanity is the oneness of unconfined emotion and perceptive precision.

12. Music Is Continuity and Surprise Music finds sound as cononnous and new in the hlankness or emptiness of the world. Music also finds continuity in the tumult, the unexpected of the world. As we listen to music, change and sameness are felt at every moment. Music is sound, proceeding from an individual, which shows the world as unlooked for and yet in keeping with the hopes we had all the time.

13. Food Is Oneself Becoming the World through making the world himself. In cating anything, we assimilate the world; that is, the world becomes like ourselves. The fact that we need food in order to have the strength to complain of the world is one of the great signs that the world is more friendly than we know. 14. Air Shows How We Are

Whenever we are angry, or surprised, or ever so hopeful, the way we breathe shows this. A baby in a rantrum shows an enmity to air-asthe-world, which all human beings at any time may have. If we are angry, we can deeply show our displeasure by not wanting to breathe air coming from a world which has displeased us.

15. Sex Is Either

Sex is either a means of baving the world just the way we want it—that is, having contempt for it; or it can be the means of making the ordinary things of the world take on more meaning. Sex, therefore, is always either for contempr or respect. The chief thing wrong with sex is that venge on a world which we see as not having been good to us. Sex often is revenge, not expression.

16. Alcoholism

Alcoholism is a popular means of annulling dislike of the world through a certain flowing thing which can make the world seem friendly and on one's side. The bad thing about alcoholism is that the success one bas in transmuong the world is not believed in by all of oneself, and often changes to something less comforting.

17. Gambling Makes Love to the World

Gambling is a way of proving to oneself that the world, sometimes familiarly ealled Lady Luck, is for one. Some persons simply have to prove that the unknown forces of the world like them. The need to feel this is profound and driving. Therefore, a person may lonk at his cards as if God were looking at bim and judging him.

18. Drugs Tell the World Bye-Bye We all of us would like to get away from a world withour enough solace for or approval of ourselves. Drugs are 2 means of changing a harsh, commanding, puzzling world into one more ready to do as one desires. Drugs as the means to this yearned-for change, will be sought, purchased, stolen.

Many people see other people as representing a world not so friendly or good to themselves.

The world regarded as enemy becomes people you don't have to care for, people you have a right to take things from, and if necessary, to hurt. Crime is often a deep retaliacion on a world not seen as good enough to oneself and for oneself.

20. Power Is Good and Bad

When you affect a person, that is, have some power over him; and you respect him more because there is this effect, the power you have is good. When food bas power over us hy giving us more strength, we can like this assistance from the food. We can like the power music may have over us. When we like the meaning a person has for us, love that is true is present; and meaning is power. Power, therefore, had by yourself has two consequences: you respect the person yielding to that power; or you have contempt for him. In the second possibility lies much of the social misery of America and the

21. Economics Has Made for Bad Power

Economics has made for had power in the history of the world and of America. At no time should a person have had to depend on another person for the chance to be productive; that is, to work. The way men have got jobs ot given them through the years has been unjust or unethical. In May 1970, I said the protest against the way jobs were bad and profits were There will be no economic recovery in the world until economics itself, the making of money, the having of jobs, becomes ethical; is based on good will rather than on the ill will which bas been predominant for centuries.

22. Marriage Is for Liking the World Marriage is a means for liking the world through a person. Too often, though, marriage is a contempruous exclusion of the world.

23. Wars Arise from Contempt

In The Right of Aesthetic Renlism to Be Known, or TRO, Numbers 165 and 166, I showed that war arises from that nationalism which often is contempt for another nation and the people of that nation. I quoted Winston Churchill's The Gathering Storm to sustain what was said. The desire for contempt is so deep and large in man that, with anger preceding, it may seem right for a man to be the cause of another man's lying dead on the ground. Contempt causes insanity; it therefore causes

24. Loneliness Is Individualism in Reverse We all of us want to be individuals or to depend only on ourselves. Individualism, corruptly proceeding, is the exclusion of all but ourselves. Wheo individualism gets into the sad field (and it often does), it becomes the loneliness associated with isolated, small railway stations, with pulling at a rowboat all night by oneself, or being in a tunnel with no sense of exit. Lordliness and empire have become grey, have become dismaying loncliness.

25. Brothers and Sisters

Brothers and sisters may use each other to have a victory over themselves and also over the world or other people. I have recently used John Ford's play Tis Pity She's a Whore (1633) to show that the love of Giovanni and Annabella has its unfortunate likeness in many families. I have written of this in TRO 169 under the title "In Darkest Family."

26. Sincerity Is Oneself as Real

When one sees that it is best to be exact about oneself, for oneself is as real as anything in the world, sincerity is liked and followed.

27. Dreams

Dreams are eriocisms of oneself through pictures one earlier was busy in arranging.

28. Science Loves Exactitude Science is a belief in the exactitude of things.

Science, then, bas faith in this: The more a thing is fully and precisely seen, the more it goes along with one's greatest hopes. Science and faith, in the long run, are one thing.

29. Knowledge

Knowledge is an aesthetic state in which the exactitude of a thing and the way it can be seen by an individual arc one. To see a black table is precision. To see a green frog on that table, with the music of stringed instruments being played, is knowledge too, arising from the fact that black table, green frog, and slow string music are related. Knowledge is always a junetion of specificity and relation.

30. Freedom Is Double

Man has two freedoms: the freedom to do what he really wants to do, and the freedom to do what he doesn't want to do. Ego, or the self in its incompleteness, is the cause of our using freedom ro be false to ourselves. Aesthetic Realism studies freedom that is large and just to oneself and also a seeming freedom which lets part of ourselves sadly and unhandsomely

31. The Past Can Be Seen Better

The past is what it is, but it can always be seen better. The past, seen better, can reasonably be regarded as changing. If we see what has happened to us better today, we give the past a more promising future. There is no limit to how well we can see anything in the past. This means the past can join the present and future, wisely.

32. Guilt Is This

Goilt is the feeling that we don't like something enough. This guilt is based on the feeling that we don't like the world enough.

Aesthetic Realism Has Been Tested

What Eli Siegel bas written in bis Outline of Aesthetic Realism has been tested in perhaps .30,000 Aesthetic Realism lessons. Many letters now exist showing the effect of Aesthetic Realism. A large result, too, is that persons who once had Aesthetic Realism lessons are now of twelve consultation trios doing effective work with husbands, wives, sons, daughters, childrenthat is, people.

Some of the consultation tries now busy are: Consultation With Three (principal subject, homosexuality), The Kindest Art (principal subject, the artist as person); First Person Plural (principal subject, women in a friendly and unfriendly world); The Three Persons (questions known and nuknown of a woman); There Are Wives (nearness and distance in domestic life); Spain Is Truth or España Es Verdad (Aesthetic Realism expressed in Spanish). And the other trios are all worth knowing.

What Eli Siegel says in bis Outline is dealt with more at length in The Aesthetic Method in Self-Conflict (1946), the first work which presented aesthetics as the answer to human problems. This early work is now combined with Psychiatry, Economics, Aesthetics, also of 1946, which presents contemporary economics as having an unfavorable effect on individual emotion. The combined two works are a present publication of Definition Aesthetic Realism began with Eli Siegel's poem, "Hnt Afternoons Have Been in Montana," Notion Prize, 1925. This poem, with many others, is in Eli Siegel's Hnt Afternnons Have Been in Montana: Poems. These poems are the poetic beginnings of Aesthetic Realism and its poetic substance.

Perhaps the place in America most fair to possibilities of . thought is the Aesthetic Realism Foundation, 141 Greene Street. The Foundation is an independent, educational, not-for-profit

Aesthetic Realism consultations take place every day at the Aesthetic Realism Foundation. Since 1971, there have been more than 13,000 consultations, each presenting life as diverse, sorrowful, to be better known. A consultation trio that could be mentioned at this time is The Young Mind, which has convinced persons between 8 and 18 or so that some people know how they feel.

Seminars take place every Thursday. These seminars have seemed to be really just to life in New York and America. And there are informative Saturday presentations; Sunday anro-Thought is at onec ethics, science, and art. These, seen deeply, show religion as a way of seeing the world accurately, comprehensively, fairly. What is going on at 141 Greene Street, the Aesthetic Realism Foundation, will, it is hoped, be more usefully seen through the present advertisement.

Comment by Six Persons.

We think-and many others do-that America needs to know Aesthetic Realism. We have in our own lives found the Aesthetic Realism of Eli Siegel to be that which we were looking for; and we bad had an education rather rich. How deeply we want the media and people to be fair to Eli Siegel and his thought! Our emotion here is so large, it may not seem consonant with the sobriety and utilitarian purpose of an advertisement. Still, a deep and comprehensive emotion is there. We bave looked at it long enough and looked at its cause long enough to know that the emotion is sound, hased truly. We are pleased to honor Eli Siegei on his birthday. How we wish many, many others join us!

New Head at Brown U.

Howard Robert Swearer

By LESLIE MAITLAND The stately brick maosion on Power Street in Provideoce that is reserved for Brown University's president will be occupied early next year by the word "chal-

Within the last two years, the 213-year-old ivy League university has endured a four-day student strike, a takeover of the administration building hy minority group students, the resigna-tion of its president, and now, a strike by custodial workers. A more fundamental chal-lenge, Dr. Swearer has al-ready pointed out, is the school's need for funds. He does not appear daunted. "To be a part of assisting this university to continue refining and defining its mission is a weighty task but a joyous one if approached in a spirit of expectant accom-plishment and adventure," Dr. Swearer said.

Once Withdraw Name The search for a president that began last summer when Donald F. Hornig announced his plan to resign this June, after six years in office, might have ended much sooner if Dr. Swearer had been willing. At one point, he even withdrew his name from the list of 600. name from the list of 600 candidates considered by Brown's search committee.

"It was an agonizing decision to make," he said, describing his feelings about leaving the presidency of Carleton College in Northfield, Minn., where his "roots were deep" and his loyalties strong, to take charge of Brown's 5,100 undergraduetes 1 300 graduate students ates, 1,300 graduate students and 450 faculty members. Born in Hutchinson, Kan., on March 13, 1932, Dr. Swearer graduated with high booors from Princeton Uni-versity's Woodrow Wilson School of International Relations in 1954. He earned a master's in political science from Harvard in 1956 and a doctorate there four years

Strategy for Pairs Contest Bridge: Strategy for Pairs Contest Different from Rubber Game

By ALAN TRUSCOTT

The expert engaged in a pairs contest must take into pairs contest must take into account a dimension unknown to the ruhber bridge player. In determining his strategy be may need to consider what may happen on the same deal at other tables. An interesting example of this approach is furnished by the diagramed deal from the recent Summer Nationals in Salt Lake City. The declarer was 17-year-old Martin Fleisher of Teaneck, N. J., who was in the news on two counts: by reaching the final of the Grand National Team Championship he became the youngest player ever to reach the last stage of a national knockout contest; and at the same time be be-came a life master, the youngest resident of the New York metropolitan area ever

Fleisher judged his hand slightly too strong for an opening of one no-trump and hid one cluh. One would expect North to respond one no-trump, but be preferred one diamond and East made a pre-emptive jump overcall in spades. South's two no-trump rebid suggested a hand too good to open one no-trump, and his partner naturally continued to game. Spade is Led

When a spade was led, the declarer had an interesting planning problem. He could feel sure that his right-hand opponent held six good spades, and it was very likely that the diamond ace was oo his left. Holding that card, East would probably bave bid one spade.

Obviously, the cootract was in jeopardy with routine play. If South won the first trick with the king, the de-fenders would be able to run the whole spade suit when West gained the lead with his presumed dismond. with his presumed diamond

In rubber bridge or team play, the sulution is not difficult to find: Duck the first trick, preserving the king and the queen as a stopper and eliminating the East's spade suit as a threat. This would give the declarer nine tricks, with one in each black suit and seveo in the

But Fleisher stopped to consider what might happen at other tables. There was strong likelihood that other declarers would make an overtrick, either because South opened one no-trump and spades were neither hid nor led, or because North became the declarer and gained a trick with a spade

Making nine tricks for a score of 400 was therefore likely to result in few match-points and a heroic and suc-cessful effort would be needed to make an overtrick. At the first trick he made the strange play of the spade queen from the dummy.

East Wins With Ace If East had ducked he would later have scored his spades and defeated the contract by two tricks. But it did not seem to him that this offered any hope. The play of the queen was the standard play for the declarer if he had begun with K-x-x in spades, and East not unnaturally made this assumption. He won with the ace and shifted to a heart, determined to prevent South from making two spade

Now Fleisher had the time be needed to develop bis tricks. He knocked out the diamond ace, and West sur-prised his partner by produc-ing another spade. The de-clarer took his spade king and his red-suit winoers and eventually scored his ninth trick with the club and a 10th by leading toward the club queeo.

By deliberately jeopardizing his cootract by his play at the first trick, Fleisber had emerged with an over-trick. By doing so he had not obtained a good score, but he had avoided a bad one, which is just as important.

Peking Aides Say Earthquake Danger Lessens in Capital

The Globe and Man, Towards PEKING, Monday, Aug. 16— Chinese officials said last night

Chinese officials said last night that "no strong earthquake will occur in the near future" in Peking, but they did not say whether this meant that Peking's 17-day-old earthquake alert had ended.

In a statement that many regarded as confusing, the officials also said: "The general tendency is that aftershock activities are diminishing, but there will be ups and downs in the process and there may be the process and there may be fairly strong aftersbocks."

It was not clear whether the officials meant that the aftersbocks would affect only the shocks would affect only the original epicenter area of Tangshan, a city devastated by the major quake on July 28. Officials were asked to clarify the tatement but refused to do so. Many of Peking's six million esidents were still living on

The official news media were dominated this weekend hy op-timistic but fragmentary reports rom the Tangshan area. The Communist Party newspaper Jenmin Jih Pao reported that 21 factories and mines in the Tangshan area had "resumed production, either wholly or partly."

The newspaper said that banks and a number of sbops, schools and hospitals were open, but it left the suggestion that many of these were operating in tents. The report also said that the Tangshan power plant had begun generating electricity.

Clearing Our Passages

PASSAGES, By Golf Sheehy. 393 pages. Dutton.

$10.95. While in college, I remember wondering, on hearing a professor describe a familier phenomenon in the special terminology of his discipline, whether he had added any-thing to my feeling and understanding of this material. Like good poetry, new words can freshen and deepen our sense of an experience-or like bad poetry, they can obscure it.

I believe that people got tired of Freud's terminology before they did of his ideas. In fact, many of those who rejected Freud never got as far as understanding his ideas. In any case, there came a time when his language would no longer suffice for a large part of the reading public, and this set off a revolution in psychological writing.

I say a revolution in psychological writing because in many cases the system was essentially the same and the language was merely window dressing. Metaphor, for example, plays an astonishingly large part in psychological systems. And one feels, sometimes, that such metaphors are merely e generalization of the particular, rather than a discovery of the universal.

Poetic Efflorescences

Birth trauma, primal scream, orgone therapy, encounter, transaction, gestalt: these ere just e few of the metaphors or poetic efflorescences that have been inferred from humen development. When I read Eric Berne's "What Do You Sav After You Say Helio?" I waa siruck by the similarity of meny of his formulations to Freud's. What he had done, it seemed to me, wasto update and democratize the vocabulary. The poet Robert Lowell did the same thing for Baudelaire in his "Imitations," which were modernized equivalents of Baudelaire's poems. The result, in this case, was brilliant, for as T.S. Eliot said, Baudelaire's language has not worn well. Neither has Freud'a.

"Passages," Gail Sheehy offers yet another translation of the human predica-ment. Perhaps because I read so many similar books, many of her formulations strike me es an arbitrary lebeling of the commonsensical, an attempt to create a system or structure to embrece experiences that seem simply circumstantial. "Passages" also appears to be somewhet overgeneralized, but then I suppose that any description of human beings in their infinite variety must sound that way.

On the other hand, I think that Miss Sheehy's fundamental idea is more original —at least in the way she applies it—than she does. She sees some of the various conflicts or crises of adult life not as expressing an inevitable pathology or dysfunction but as the same sort of developmental stages that we take for granted in children. While she selfdeprecatingly points out that Shakespeare spoke of the seven stages of man and that Hindu philosophy also refers to four surprisiogly concrete and interesting developmental periods, Miss Sheehy does not give herself sufficient credit for adapting this notion-with some Ingenuity to contemporary life. Erik Homburger Erikson wrote of various crises or stages in human life, too, but while she draws upon his ideas, Miss Sheehy adds to them as well. She has a talent for the concrete, partly because she is a good journalist and partly because she has talked with 11S people about the patterns of their lives and tried to isolate in wartorn Ireland and standing next to a young man whoe fece is shot off in her presence. The incident comes across as ethetic and its relevence is forced, out Miss Sheehy redeems it by turning it into a personal epiphany in which she suddenly realizes that "no one is with me. No one cao keep me safe. There is no one who woo't ever leave me alone." She is confrooted, at the age of 35, with what she called "the arithmetic of life."

Now, we all know that we are mortal, yet we can never have enough shock-ofrecognition reminders of that fact. And this is what I find best in "Passages": Miss Sheehy reminds us, not with the detachment of a Freudian psychoanalyist but with the fervor of a street-corner evangelist, of all the recognitions we sneak under the rug. She threateos, rhapsodizes, nags, exhorts-all for the purpose of weking us up to our possibilities. If you read "Passages," you will be io less danger of living the unexamined life that Socrates

Some of her coinages, such as passages, mergers, seekers and transieots, have for me the effect of making the experiences they describe more vivid. Others, like inner custodians, are no better than super-ego or introjected parent. While Freud's ironic resignation was elegant, he may have sold us short in arriving at it. The swing now is to demotic optimism: You can do it if you try. And the truth is probably somewhere in between Middle-eged and elderly persons are today's favorite minority, at least on paper. Youth can take cere of itself. Our response to the fear of death seems to be an increesing attempt to romanticize the decades preceding it. Mr. Erikson speaks of the age of "integration" and the Hindus spoke of sonnyasin, "one who neither hates nor loves anything." Miss Sheeny uses 'growth" and "renewal" pretty much as they were open options to most middle-aged people, almost as if this period were a rebirth free of the trauma of the first one. There is some of the feminist insistence on the power of positive thinking in this section.

'Predictable Crises'

There are in later life the "predictable crises" Miss Sheehy refers to, and whet she says about them can be useful-but there are unpredictable crises too, which she sidesteps as "life accidents," and this is not very useful. I wonder whether a book could not just as easily have been written about these unpredictable crises. As the author herself says, middle age is the flowering of eccentricity, but it is one thing to predict eccentricity and another to cope with it, Miss Sbeehy also speaks of "approving of oneself at last," as if, io middle age, we all succeed io coughing up and spitting out our iotrojected pareots or cultural conditioning.
While I do not find "Passages" profound,

I'm not sure that more adult lives warrant or support profuodity. Io being faithful to her material, in resisting the temptation to write in blood after her first chapter, Miss Sheehy has done about as much as a good journalist can do. This evaluation is not meant to be condescending. I am reminded of a remark made by Samuel Johoson on his deathbed. When a friend offered to the decisive factors.

Her introduction tells of covering a story plump up his pillow, Johnson s doing all that a pillow can do. plump up his pillow, Johnson sald, No, it is

To Kansas City

As recent hosts to a Presidential convention, New Yorkers will wish Kansas City well as it welcomes the Republican delegates and alternates today for a week of historical scrapping. We wish that the Missouri city could expect as harmonious a gathering as New York enjoyed. Unanimity on the Presidential nomination may make for a subdued convention, but it leaves the delegates more time and energy to explore the host city and fosters a generally relaxed spirit.

While such does not appear to be the prospect for Kansas City, neither are there present those fierce national tensions that made an outright disgrace of the Chicago Democratic convention of 1968. Nor is the air filled with quite the bitterness - though hitter feelings are certainly on the rise-that prevailed when the Republicans tore their party wide open in the Goldwater gathering of 1964. Yet no one expects the Kansas City convention to resemble in the least the stifling, automated Republican affair of four years ago, which was so totally planned and programmed that the delegates were told exactly when President Nixon would be introduced and how long they were to applaud.

One can hope that the struggle for the nomination, the fights over key planks in the platform and the possible conflicts over the choice for Vice President will all be resolved without so great a degree of passionate engagement that the delegates are kept from enjoying the pleasures of their host city-a city that has in recent years totally obliterated its one-time reputation as a boss-ridden cattle town. Indeed it is widely regarded now as a model of how husiness and government, working together, can so recreate the character of a metropolitan community that André Maurois was to ask in astonishment, "Who in Europe, or in America for that matter, knows that Kansas City is one of the loveliest cities on earth?" The very question promises balm for weary and battle-scarred delegates, victor and vanquisbed alike.

The Arts in New York

The administrative process of dispensing arts funds to worthwhile organizations in every county of New York State is not quite as "creative" as mounting a play or choreographing a dance or writing an opera in the first instance; but great artistic knowledge and diplomatic skills are nevertheless required to match money, need and the muse.

Arts administrators and advisers must say "no" more often than "yes" to those seeking a slice of the hudgetary pie as they try to disburse funds equitably and speedily. There are difficulties hullt into the system in the legislatively mandated balancing of funds among the larger primary institutions, many hased in Manhattan, and for the smaller arts groups all over the state.

A corner was being turned in recent months under the chairmanship of Joan Kaplan Davidson in the methods of choosing recipients more openly, but a 15 percent staff cut for economy had slowed down disbursements. Now, in the midst of the grant cycle, Mrs. Davidson has been replaced as chairman of the State Council on the Arts hy Kitty Carlisle Hart, and new members have been added to the council's governing board. It is to be hoped that Mrs. Hart's longtime experience in the performing arts will keep up the momentum of delivering arts services in every field.

The $27.3 million in annual funds is a mark of New York's continuing commitment to cultural activities. Compared with other state budgetary cuts, the council has fared well. Some of the new council members, such as Kurt Vonnegut Jr., can add professionalism to the selection process; others with iless experience should also be fundamentally involved and not considered mere political appointments or window dressing. A simplified system of applications, especially for small groups, and clarified guidelines on eligibility for grants should help to keep the programs alive, the museum doors open, the curtains up.

Student Aid

Deputy Budget Director Robert J. Bott has shown laudable imagination and initiative in recruiting 17 Baruch College accounting majors to clear up a backlog of claims by the city for state and Federal aid for childcare agencies and in circumventing hureaucratic obstacles to the project at the City University.

The students responded with remarkable competence and public-spirited zeal in processing $38 million in claims -- at a cost of only $25,000 in privately contributed funds. They have done their university, as well as the city, an outstanding service hy demonstrating the kind of constructive role an urban institution of higher learning can play when it is realistically attuned to metropolitan needs.

The only pity is that the professionals who are paid to do the job-in the Department of Social Services and throughout the sluggard municipal bureaucracy-bave so dismally failed to show similar skill and dedication in protecting the city's interests. Send in more students!

Restoring Police Time

The Temporary Commission on City Finances estimated last spring that New York City police officers work fewer than 1,700 hours a year-roughly the equivalent of a 35-hour week with four weeks' vacation—at a cost to the city, when all fringe benefits are considered, of more than $21 per hour.

Those startling indexes of municipal generosity more than justify the decision of an impasse panel which calls for a revision of police work schedules that would require 18,500 officers to work ten additional tours of duty a year. The ruling falls short of returning the 18 tours per officer that the city gave away when a duty "chart" system was introduced four years ago, hut it will restore $13 million worth of police patrol time which

The Patrolmen's Benevolent Association has filed an appeal seeking to overturn the decision. It is regrettable that the union's leaders and members apparently fail to recognize that a reasonable sacrifice of excessively generous benefits represents their own hest protection against additional drastic cuts in police ranks. Given the state of New York's hndget and economy, the impasse panel's finding-roughly midway between the optimum demands of city and union-was more than fair to the men in blue.

The New Middle East

old constants in the dangerous Middle East equation have been reduced to nullity. The secular democratic state of Lebanon and the Palestine Liberation Organization are, as a practical matter, no longer functioning elements in world affairs. Each preserves its shell, available to be reused, but only through the grace and favor of outside Lebanon, the cosmopolitan, monied port of entry to the Arab world on Israel's northern frontier, is now a divided nation—a coastal strip administered by the Maronite Christian community and the inland areas controlled by Syria. The bulk of Lebanon is under Syrian occupation as much as the West Bank is under Israel's. The two de facto administrations are in tacit alliance against the dwindling third force, the leftwing Moslem activists and their Palestinian sympathizers.

The P.L.O. and its titular leader, Yasir Arafat, whose partisanship would have been well received by the Syrians when they entered Lebanon in force last June, instead threw in their lot with the leftist losers. The massive encampments which the Palestinians constructed in southern Lebanon, ostensibly for launching attacks against the Israeli enemy, have been neutralized if not totally destroyed. The Palestinian base in exile bas been demolished in Lebanon in this summer of 1976 as thoroughly as it was in Jordan in the "Black September" of

This new political complexion, quite unforeseen a year ago when the world's diplomats were busily fashioning Middle East peace packages, alters all the calculations for the next round of peacemaking. The wrong interpretation of the new situation, the slightest miscalculation, might eliminate the new room for maneuver and provoke a war hy accident that could be more ruinous for all the participants than all the wars that have gone before.

Lebanon

The division of Lebanon may endure for a long time. Israel's support for Christian Lebanon is scarcely muted. Israel and the mercantile elite of Lebanon, largely Maronite, have long enjoyed an affinity of interests-not least one of hostility to Palestinian power-that is absent from relations with most of Israel's other neighbors.

How long Syria will tolerate this unspoken alliance. after the immediate Palestinian and Lebanese leftist threat is passed, will depend upon what kind of interim

In slow and painful steps these past months, two of the political deal the diplomats can devise between Israel and Syria once the peacemaking machinery starts turning

• The P.L.O.

The Palestinian future is even more subtie. Those in Israel and elsewhere who gloat over the collapse of the P.L.O. are short-sighted. If their leadership has faltered. the Palestinians still exist — as a people. No one can anticipate a stable Arab-Israeli peace until this disaffected element is integrated into the political evolution

From collapse comes the moment for rebirth. Many sympathizers of the Palestinian cause have long regretted the strategy of terrorism, opportunism and extremism. There were-and are-other strategies toward the goal of national identity.

When Mr. Arafat and the P.L.O. were making most dramatic beadway, mainly among Arab governments hut in the United Nations as well, there was little incentive for the widely dispersed Palestinians to seek alternative policies or leadership. Yet even inside the P.L.O. over the past year there have been signs of unrest, of readiness to compromise, to accept co-existence with the Israeli state, despite the unyielding rhetoric. A new generation of Palestinian leaders has emerged in the occupied West Bank and Gaza-not tainted with the exiles' coffee-house intrigues but actively engaged in the life of their land.

The Future

Too much has been invested in the aura of the PLO to expect that organization to be altogether supplanted. But what can happen, and should be encouraged, is a shift in P.L.O. policies and, if necessary, personnel-away from the terror-minded ideologues and toward moderates. Israel and the United States bave a role to play in this process of rebirth, but it is primarily the leading Arab states that have the interest and capability to nudge the P.I.O. into realism and responsibility.

The shell of the P.L.O. should not be triumphantly ignored next time the diplomats assemble; the Palestinians should be invited into the process of making peace, offered an outlet for constructive accommodation to replace the policy of destruction that has only destroyed

Greek-Turkish Sea Dispute

To the Editor.

We agree with you (editorial Aug. 6) that cooperation is necessary for the resolution of our differences with Turkey. Greek politicians have re-peatedly stressed that "Greece and Turkey have to live peacefully together." To this end, Greece proposed to Turkey the conclusion of a nonaggression pact which Turkey rejected. It will be helpful to the achievement of neighborly coexistence if certain misconceptions, some of which are apparent in your editorial, are clari-

It must be made clear that Turkey denies continental shelf rights to Greek islands, which are not tiny, as you suggest, but sizable in area and population and robust in economic life. This is a problem of delimitation of the continental shelf in the Aegean and this was emphasized by the Greek Prime Minister, who also rejected the Turkish accusation that Greece considers the Aegean as a Greek lake. It was for this reason that Greece urged Turkey to join her in submitting the issue to the International Court of Justice. But Turkey, while originally accepting in principle the Greek proposal, has consistently failed to give practical cooperation to the procedure.

Instead of helping to solve the Aegean problem by international litigation, and while the whole ques-

As for Cyprus, we agree that a solution would clear the way for a settlement of our other differences with Turkey. However, a solution is not a matter, as you suggest, for bilateral negotiation between the two states, neither of which has or should have any claim over what is, after all, the sovereign and independent state of Cyprus. As officially stated by the American side, "the only solution which will restore domestic tranquility for all the citizens of that island is one which they work out among themselves." But, due to Turkey's intransigence, talks between the two communities in Cyprus have led nowhere and the plight of the Cypriot people continoes.

I am not able to make a sound judgment of the "modest" proposals on unemployment which Maynard Swift recommends in his Aug. 7 letter. Regardless of how I try, his recommending euthanasia for all persons 75 years old or older blocks out concentration on the rest of his letter.

I suppose the reason is that I am already beyond the critical 75 years: and so is my wife. Would Mr. Swift consider a grandfather clause that would exempt grandparents who are already 75 or older?

On U.S.-Soviet Nuclear Security

ZELIG SOKOLL

Your readers will be seriously misled if they believe the views on nuclear security recently reported by C. L.

The assertion that Soviet "missile sites have been hardened to about fifteen times the strength of those in the United States" is spectacularly incorrect. Unclassified figures indicate the average U.S. ICBM silo today is substantially barder than its Soviet counterpart. Comparing the best of each side's silos, it is an open question which is more survivable, and moderate differences in hardness have small effect on survivability. For example, if a given silo has 50 percent probability of surviving a given nuclear attack, doubling its hardness would increase survivability only up to about 64 percent. Claims of Soviet strategic nuclear superiority over the United States are incorrect. True, the Soviets are "ahead of America in nuclear throwweight, total ICBM's and submarine-launched missiles and megatonnage." But these are superficial and inadequate measures of nuclear capability. The "bottom line" is the ability to destroy-soft and hard targets.

in soft target capability, which is primarily a function of numbers of warheads, the U.S. holds a lead of perhaps one third. This will be lost over the next few years as the Soviet particularly significant since both sides already have more soft target capability than they can use.

Hard-target capability, which primarily a function of accuracy, is more interesting hecause of its firststrike potential and because neither side has it in significant quantities today. (If our SALT negotiators continue their tradition of irrelevance, both sides will have very substantial bard target canability by the late 1980's.) Today, unclassified figures suggest the U.S. has about twice as much hard-target capability as the Soviet Union. This margin will narrow slightly in the late 1970's and widen

As far as Soviet civil defense is concerned, it is true the Soviets bave a great many people working on it. They also have a great many people working on agriculture but in neither case does quantity necessarily produce performance. Even if we assume the Soviets could in fact evacuate their cities, there is no way they could prevent themselves from being elimmated as an industrial society. Perhaps most importantly, there is no way the Soviet Government could preserve its leadership from a U.S. attack, nor

A Possible Gauge of What's Sticking in America's Craw

By John D. Ehrlichman

SANTE FE, N. M .- Spiro Agnew is partly right and partly wrong. The news media are controlled, but not by the people he suspects.

Having just returned from an author's tour to 18 cities, I now know that the whole media thing—news-papers, radio news, television—is run by the world Styrofoam cartel. This secret group is imposing a dangerous uniformity on American journalism.

For example, there are rigid rules for the conduct of author interviews that seem to apply almost everywhere.

Rule one is that every touring author must be handed a Styrofoam cup within 30 seconds of his arrival at a studio or newsroom. Something hot and dark brown should be in it. Rule two is that every interviewer must ask the same questions. Rule three applies primarily to local television interviewers: Interviewers listen only to the questions, never the answers (some of them violate this rule, but not very

Yet there is hope, notwithstanding pervasive media domination by the Princes of Styrofoam, for even they cannot hope to impose their rules upon the indomitable callers who telephone the radio and television talk shows. And, where these real folks are being heard, it may well be true rather than the President or the White that the questions are more important than the answers.

Discounting the occasional nut and the hosts who try to stack the deck, what is heard in the call-in questions may be the legendary and elusive voice of the people. As I traveled around, I concluded that the politicians would do well to listen to these callers in this year of platforms, promises and piousness. Their telephoned questions may be some true gauge of what's in the voters' craw.

The recently reported coogressional peccadillos have not escaped the notice of your average talk-show caller. They ask if that kind of thing has gone on in Washington in other times and parties, or is it something blighting only the current crop of middleaged Democrats? Most callers strongly suspect that the Congressman is dogging it at their expense. It may be a bad year for the "ins" in Congress.

In all regions of the country I beard comments and questions about the Nixon pardon. There were good reasons for the pardon, I am sure, but no one out in the country seems to know what they were. Interestingly, the people are willing to listen on this subject and I sense that many can be persuaded that President Ford did the right thing. But, so far, the Republican Party has not sustained its burden of proof. I say the party

House because I strongly sense that people out and around the country view the pardon issue broadly, as they do other aspects of "the Wasbingtoo problem."

Moreover, it is an issue any Republican candidate will face. Even Ronald Reagan will find it impossible to criticize or repudiate the pardon without risking alienating a substantial segment of his conservative base that still consists of diehard Nixon supporters.

There is also a pervadiog demand in the called-io questions that Richard Nixon and the rest of us tell the nation that we're sorry about what happened. They wonder why we haven't apologized. When told that some of us have, they ask why it basn't been reported on their television sets. A Nixon memoir which includes expressed contrition should be a runaway best seller.

Many, many callers express a skepticism about what they have beard about or read in "The Final Days." The allegations about the Nixons' personal life clearly remain open ques-tions in the minds of the majority I talked to. Yet, while they don't believe the Bernstein-Woodward versioo. they realize that, after his nearly 30 years in the public view, Richard Nixon remains an enigma to them. People want to know what he's really like, in exquisite detail. They are still worried about the break-in? If not, why did the 'Water-

Central Intelligeoce Agency out there in the country. The Senate Oversight Committee has apparently not inspired much confidence that it can get the C.I.A. in band. One caller suggested that a senator who swears he can't keep track of bis top assistant and his personal campaign contributions is a poor choice to try to keep an eye on what goes on behind the C.I.A.

smokescreeo. And recent F.B.I. and C.L.A. admissions of lawbreaking were a frequent subject of the calls I took. Countless callers wondered about the real reason for the White House taping system, Other unanswered Watergate questions still nag: Why did the burglars want to go into the Democrats' Watergate office anyway? No one seems to know. Was the C.I.A. involved? A lot of people seem to suspect so. Did the White House plan the > gaters" cover it up? After this unscientific sampling, 1 have to say that Walter Mondale is probably right: Watergate and its aftermath are still very much in the miods of the voters and, so far, the Nixon pardon has tied President Ford to Watergate, bowever unfair and unfactual such a link may be.

The Republican National Convection is about to mocopolize national television. The close contest for the nomination assures the Republicans a large viewing audience. Shouldn't they use the time to explain, clearly and conclusively, the President's good reasons for the Nixon pardon?

Some of my former colleagues used to argue: Talk only about our good issues, never the bad ones. Watergate is the opposition's issue, not "ours," so it should never be mentioned. I disagreed then and I still do. The Nixon pardon bothers a great many Americans who, at the same time, are willing to listen. The Republicans can't duck the issue by pretending it doesn't exist, or by dumping the incumbent President. It's not a Ford problem, it's a Republican problem, if I heard those callers correctly. Republicans should use their unique opportunity to make the case for the pardon on all of that television time that will be theirs this month. If they doo't, it may not matter much who they nominate.

John D. Ehrlichman, who was the chief domestic affairs adviser to President Nixon and was convicted of Waterpate crimes, is author of the novel, "The

Reading Sears' Mind

By William Safire

KANSAS CITY, Aug. 15-His name is John Sears. He is the Reagan campaign manager and thus the most important man in the world for the next three days. Here is what one mindreading essayist guesses he is thinking:

We bave the initiative and they have the arithmetic. My task is to use our initiative to change their arithmetic before their arithmetic overwhelms our

Ford's disadvantage is that he has been "on the verge" for too long. He is stalled, and bas to play not to lose. We can play to win.

Our Schweiker move scrambled the numbers and gave us a shot at winning. Let 'em call it a blunder, but it got us here within striking distance, and it has the whole convention wondering what we'll do next. What we do next is this: go for victory on Tuesday night; first on the rules and then on the platform, rather than wait till Wednesday's balloting.

Rules come first. We go for 16-C, a rule requiring a candidate to name his running mate on the morning of the day of the vote. That's a "reform" in anybody's book, giving the delegates a voice in the selection of the Vice President. We should win that, with New Jersey and Delaware especially soft, and it will give us momentum.

What's more, that will cloak our selection of Schweiker in moral principle, end the "30 pieces of Schweiker" talk. We have to put the emphasis not oo our choice of a liberal, but on every delegate's right to know the whole ticket beforehand,

We need a slogan, to override the "misery loves company" line. Something a delegate can holler like "Wa want Wilkie." Maybe "The right to know." Or-this may be better-"No blank checks!" Gotta smuggle a drum into the hall.

We should win that vote, we've got a whole passel of delegates bound to Ford legally on the first ballot who will go with us on show-and-tell, plusthe imcommitted. If Ford resists, he'll look bad; if he doesn't, he's on the run, . Then Ford, with a black eye, will come up with his "justice" rule 18, locking in all delegates committed to him by law. They named it well, tough for us to resist, especially for a law 'n' order party. They should win that, so maybe we should not fight it treat it like no big deal, Ford will try to make a victory on that seem like the equivalent of our no-blank-check rule, and we can't let bim do that.

Should I go for another rule? We could propose that each candidate and his choice for V.P. be given the chance to speak before the convention before the balloting. If we win, Ford would have to compete with us, looking un-Presidential, or else give us a clear shot at stampeding the coovention unopposed Good ploy, but I'd hate to lose that vote, I'll decide that later. Then to the platform, Ford's people bave been shrewd on that, giving us nearly everything we wanted, putting up a wall of fluff and compromising everything. We've been all sweetness and light, too, up to now, not getting into fights on the Equal Rights Amendment or whatever.

Tuesday night, we'll zap 'em. I can't depend on the no-blank-check rule as the turning point, it can be too easily countered-Ford could easily say, "Okay with me, bere's Robert Ray or Jim Lynn, fine men with no enemies" and be'd look bad having had his hand forced, but he should be alive and

So we follow up with our strong suit-an omnibus amendment to the draft platform oo foreign affairs. A tough stand, something that draws the line unmistakably between Ford and Reagan, on their whola approach to foreign policy.

The statement will have to include a couple of triggers that call for an up and down vote, no compromise. One should be Aleksandr Solzhenitsyn, commending him as the pre-eminent moral hero of our time. President Ford snubbed him, everybody knows it, and it's time we dissociated the Republican Party from that snub.

Next, we have to make clear we don't go along with 'the Ford-Kissinger line on accommodating the Soviet Union. Détente by any other name is still detente. The trigger word is "Helsinki"—that was a mistake to sign, legitimizing the Soviet conquest of Eastern Europe, and we were suckered. There'll be some Ford delegates jumping up to say that such an omnibus blast is a repudiation of the President's foreign policy and divisive. Sorry about that, but the choice is pretty clear, and I think we'll win it on the floor. That's been our big winner on the trail, and that could give us the psychological punch here.

We need a platform plank that Ford cannot run on With that, on top of "no blank check," it could all be over. And on the way, we try to force mistakes, Rockefeller on television to day refusing to say he'll support Reagan if he's the convention choicethat's one we can hit hard tomorrow. And then there's my hole card, the "unexpecteds" we start to surface Tuesday night

As soon as I can get some sleep, I've got to think ahead. Acceptance speech we've got to issue the challenge for debates. And we mustn't let the press get angry with us for proving them wrong, the way they did with McGovern. And who do we take from the Ford operation who's good? Can't think of anybody but Bryce Harlow.

I think we'll take this nomination. First the rule on the Vice President, then the hard shot on the platform. Float like a butterfir, stine files a beat...

Because they had eroded out of the level at which they were dropped by their makers or users, there was no way to know how old they were. Stone tools can be dated reliably only when they are found in clear as-sociation with other things that are directly datable, such as bones. Such associations are found by digging very carefully in undisturbed earth and recording the exact location of each object found.

With stakes and string, Dr. Smith and his students marked off the ground into a checkerboard of squares, each two meters on a side and began digging in non-adjacent squares. The idea is both to sample the area widely without having to dig up everything and to leave part of the area intact for future scientists who, as Dr Smith put it, "know more

The digging is done in stages, proceeding down one 10-centimeter layer at a time. Using trowels, ice picks and delicately handled shovels, the dirt is loosened. When a large object is noticed, the diggiog shifts to smaller tools such as dental picks and brushes to remove the dirt

Abandoned are the green and woody slopes of Hunter Mountain, the 1S chairlifts and the base lodge that on winter weekends holds 5,000 skiers and spectators under its wooden rafters. The last snow of the season melted months ago and when it slipped away the downhill racera left with it.

At one time ski resorts would board up their win-dows at the close of the season to wait for the return of their clientele around Thanksgiving. But rising costs have ers to find some way of keen ing their facilities open in the problem facing Hunter Mountain and the other ski resorts io the Catskills end Berkshires —how to lure people to the slopes when they are not thinking snow.

Laughter Is Stilled

Bromley ski area in Man-chester, Vt., believes it has the answer-the Alpine slide. "A lot of people laughed at us," said Diane Dearington, a worker at Bromley. They are not laughing any-

Last July 4, under the re-lentless beat of a summer sun, people once again were sliding down Bromley Mountain, but not on skis. They were ridiog plastic sleds with Teflon runoers that sped to the base lodge below within the confines of a 4,060-foot asbestos cement chute.

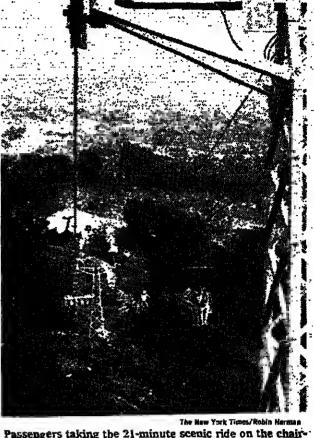

Using a hand lever to modify the breaking action, sledders hit speeds of up to 20 miles an hour around the steeply banked curves. Two people who thought they would do without brakes, fell out of the chute and were scraped up, "In any sport that's any fun," said Miss Dearington "there's also an element of danger to it."

said Paul Pepe, who was in charge of promotion for the resort. He fairly beamed when he announced that 260 tickets at $2.50 had been sold that day for the 21-minute scenic ride on the chairlift. But during the season, 15 lifts operate at twice that speed and all-day tickets go for $11 a person. Everything is relative in the summer Jerry Deluise of New York City and Jack Gleason of Yonkers were among six pic-nickers who had ascended the mountain on one of Hunter's chairlifts, renamed a "skyride" for the summer. Below the lift, orange tiger lilies and wild daisies decorated the slopes.

An industrious woodchuck support and was gnawing at it in frustration. Over the crest of a hill wild sheep could be seen grazing. At the top of the mountain there was snow—in sugar cones and flavored with syrup-for the overheated isitors. Most of the wanderers on the trails were local residents. "There are several thousand vacation homes within a 10-mile radius," Mr. round nucleus of people who ski in wintertime and spend the summer here."

Stratton Mountain near Manchester, Vt., is another resort area that draws on local residents in the summer. Three hundred family units have been bullt on its grounds and plans to build 76 more units clustered on the resort's ski trails are almost completed.

In keeping with the most recent development trend among the ski resorts, Strat-ton has invested in 14 new combe, the Australian tennis player, held a weekloog clinic there. The Stratton Realty Corporation also owns a golf course on the moun-

At Brodie Mountain in New Ashford, Mass, Jim Kelly is overseeing the secand year of summer operations. He has opened the grounds of his "Irish Alps" to campers and trailera, charging them $6 a night.

"Compared to $11 for a lift ticket, it's nothing," said Mr. Kelly, "but that's the going rate in the industry. At least it holds the crew to-gether and keeps some good men. I guess that's the most important part. It takes in about ecough to cover their salaries. All my good help used to leave in the spring."

57 Recoup Losses And Get Diplomas From High School

August is an uousual month for a high school graduation, but S7 young men and women who seemed headed for certain cholastic failure three years ago marched across the stage of Columbia University'a Wollman Auditorium last night to receive their diplomas. The graduates had just completed Columbia's Project Double Discovery, an intensive program of remedial education and counseling.

When they were tested after their freshman year in local high schools, most were found to be three years behind their grade reading level, and all displayed such a lack of motivation that none were expected to stay in school.

Not only did they stay in school, but they also spent chool-year Saturdays and three six-week summer sessions in the program. The result: 55 of the 57 are headed for college. The program, started in 1965 and financed largely by the Federal Government at a cost of $300,000 a year, offers the participants - mostly low-income residents of Central Harlem who attend Louis D. Brandeis and Benjamin Franklin High Schools-basic courses in English, mathematics and science, assorted electives and special tutoring, all designed 1) let the one-time failures di-

Leaders of the more than 80 nonaligned nations gathered over the weekend in Colombo. Sri Lanka, for the opening today of a foor-day conference. Many of the hundreds of delegates said that this was a time of transition for the 20-year-old movement. A chief topic will be "a new intercational economic order" that would seek to narrow the gap between poor and rich nations. Among the heads of state attending the conference are President Tito of Yugoslavia and Prime Mioister Indira Gandhi of India. Secretary General Kurt Waldheim of the United Natioos has been invited as a special guest. [Page 1, Column 1.]

Warned that La Soufrière volcano on the French island of Guadeloupe in the Caribbean might erupt, the authorities ordered the total evacuation of 72,000 residents in seven communities in the volcano's area. Steam and ashes were being emitted from a crack about 1,500 feet below the 4,800-foot cone. [1:2.]

Christian artillery bombarded Palestinian and leftist positions in mountains east of Beirut. The shelling was concentrated around Mt. Sannin and the town of Ain Tura and Matein in the upper Matein district, where large-scale fighting had been predicted following the fall of Tell Zaatar. A radio station controlled by President Suleiman Franjieh, head of the rightwing Lebanese front, announced that the "offensive for liberatiog the mountainside from the Palestinians has begun." [1:2.]

President Ford won an important procedural victory on the eve of the Republican National Convention. Voting 59 to 44, the President'a supporters on the convention Rules Committee defeated an attempt of Rooald Reagan's supporters to force an early annouocement of Mr. Ford's running mate. Both the President and Mr. Reagan gained delegates as a few of the small group of uncommitted delegates shed their neutrality. But both remained short of the 1,130 votes needed for nomination. [1:7-8.] Ronald Reagan said on his arrival in Kansas City, Mo., that no decision bad been reached on his strategy for the opening days of the convention. He said that the debate in the Rules Committee over the Vice-Presidential rule change was important enough to be decided by all the delegates. The committee had earlier defeated a proposal that would have forced President Ford to disclose his choice of a running mate before he was assured of the nomination. Mr. Reagan was confident that he could win the nomination on the first ballot and that a second-ballot comination was possible, too. [1:8.]

On his-arrival in Kansas City, President Ford was exuberant and predicted victory, but it appeared that he was not quite sure of it. He broke tradition by arriving for the convention well before the balloting for the Presidential nomination, which will be beld Wednesday night. Despite repeated disavowals by his staff, many observers believed Mr. Ford arrived early because he still must persuade more delegates to vote for him. [1:7.]

Well-placed sources at the Federal Bureau of Investigation said the bureau intends to continue its investigation, begun 38 years ago, of the Socialist Workers Party. The investigation will proceed, it was said, under classified Justice Department guidelines applylog to radical organizations with foreign political connections. [1:6.]

Korvettes opened 14 of its 20 stores in the New York area to Sunday shoppers, the first of New York City's major department stores to do so since the state's blue laws were set aside in June by the State Court of Appeals. An executive said that perhaps all the branches would be open next Sunday, but that apparently would depend on whether employees would be willing to work on Sunday. [1:3.]

Dr. Richard J. Carlson made bis final round at Lincoln Hospital In the South Bronx last week. While he was at the hospital he had developed into a "topflight physician-as good as they come," according to colleagues. But before he left the 31-year-old physician said in a letter to a friend: "To stay there is to watch people die needlessly." The story of Dr. Carlson is typical of the many promising young doctors, many of whom were white, like himself, who chose to enter the municipal bospital system. Of the 30 interns who started at Lincoln when he did, most of them are gone, and mostly for the same reasons. [1:4-5.]

5-Year U.S. Project to Improve Northeast Rail Line

Riders on Amtrak and commuter trains in Northeast Corridor-the 456mile stretch from Washington to New York to Bostonhave already been getting a lot of bang for their bucks. Bang-bang-hump-lurch-rat-tle-and-roll. That's the way it goes on much of the rough Starting this month, the Federal Government will pour $1.75 billion into a fiveyear program of upgrading the corridor to provide a smoother, faster ride and modernized stations. Local communities will chip in $150 million more.

Here's what to expect by 1981, according to the Federal Railroad Administration: ¶Electric-powered passen-ger trains running at speeds up to 120 miles an hour.

QReliable schedules offering New York-Washington service in 2 hours 40 minutes with five stops, an average speed of 84 miles an hour, and faster times when stops are fewer. Now, the hest running time is three hours.

New York-Boston electric service in three hours forty minutes, including five stops. The present schedule is nearly four bours. ENew electrification plus extension of electrification from New Haven, the present northern -terminus, all the way to Boston: ¶Smooth, welded rail for the entire distance: the easing of 50 or more curves for faster, smoother riding; re-placement of about ISO pre-1895 bridges and rehabilita-tion of about 800 others; elimination of grede cross-ings; improved signaling; and installation of protective fencing along the way.

glast but hardly least, extensive improvements to stations, notably New York's Pennsylvania Station.

The main waiting room at Penn Station, now adorned by scuffed, old wooden benches will be greatly expanded westward and transformed to appear much like an airport lounge.

At present the only access to Amtrak's intercity trains and Conrail'a commuter trains is at the Eighth Avenue end of the block-square station. A north-south concourse is to be opened up on the Seventh Avenue end to provide additional quick access to the platforms below.

And the platforms them-selves, now steeped in gloom, will be brightened up with modern lighting and the latest - type train - information signs similar to those in European stations. The massive expenditure on the Northeast Corridor, approved by Congress in the Railroad Revitalization Act of 1975, figures out to about $3.8 million a mile. Yet, according to Kenneth

T. Sawyer, a retired major general, who is the new director of the Federal Railroad Administration's Northeast Corridor Project: "There's basically nothing new being done It's an improvement program to bring the former Penn Central corridor up to date."

Amtrak is the successor to the bankrupt Penn Central in operating the corridor.

The improvements in speed will be relatively modestfor example, a saving of just 20 minutes on today's scheduled three-hour running time for Metroliners between New York and Washington. But Federal rail officials point out that Metroliners generally bave been running 15 and 20 minutes late at best because of poor track and other problems, so the net gain in running times by 1981 will be more like 40 minutes.

Japanese Are Faster

Generally, there are five stops, inculding Philadelphia, Baltimore and Wilmington. Two of the following stops are made at varying times; Newark, Metropark, Trenton and Capital Beltway, Md.

Despite the $1.75 billion expenditure, trains in the corridor in the early 1980's will trail substantially behind European and Japanese ex-presses in speed capability. which already

Japan, which already enjoys the fastest train service in the world, is expanding its high-speed network by undersea tunnels to Hokkaido, northern most main island, and to Kyushn, the southernmost

Speeds on the Tokyo-Osaka 320-mile run average out to more than 100 miles an hour, including stops

The newest extensions are built for maximum speeds of 155 miles an bour. In Europe, Italy is well-advanced in tunneling through the Apennines for 155-mile-an-hour top speeds on a new route between Rome and Florence. West Germany bas two similar high-speed routes under construction, the first links in a future nationwide network. And France is soon to start commtruction of the government - approved high-speed electrified line between

Paris and Lyon. By 1981 or 1982, when New York-Washington trains are averaging 84 miles an hour (including five stops), the French plan to be making the new 262-mile Paris-Lyon run in two hours flat, an average of 131 miles an hour, with top speeds of 160. About 90

trains are being ordered for the service. For the United States, the recovery from a long period of railroad neglect is slow. The private railroads bad no money to spend for passenger improvements. Now, at last, the Federal Government has stepped into the picture with big money, although the major spending on the corridor is not expected until General Sawyer expresses enthusiasm. After noting that hillions of Federal dollars have gone into highways and into airport development, he "This is the first time anybody in the Federal Government has put anything into rail.'

Even the Federal Highways Administration is contributing its expertise in the design work. Private companies will do the detailed design and

By 1978, when construction reaches its peak, about 15,000 men will be on the job up and down the corridor, according to General Sawyer. In New Jersey, which has some of the fastest rail stretches, there will be 1S miles of concrete cross-ties to permit a more stable road-

But General Sawyer says that "some spectacular curves we're going to have to leave alone" because not enough money will be available.

For example, an S-curve that slows trains through Elizabeth, N.J., apparently is not one of the candidates for realignment. And the old drawbridge across the Hackensack River in the Jersey Meadows—celebrated for getting stuck-is not being replaced, but the machinery wil be modernized. An original plan called for replac-ing it with a bigh-level span.

Only last month the recalcitrant old brideg got stuck in the open position for more than two hours, tying up the

Taking Control of Corridor

General Sawyer says the prospect is for freight and commuter trains mixing with Amtrak's intercity traffic in the corridor for the indefinite future. He is hopeful, he said in an interview, that more improvements will be undertaken in the corridor after with optimism that Congress bas called for progress reports and further recommendations to be made both in 1978 and 1982

Conrail came into being on April 1 this year, primarily as a freight carrier but also as the operator of commuter services, primarily in New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania.

However, it is Amtrak that is taking control of the Northeast Corridor and actually becoming a railroad with its own trackage for the first time in its five-year history. Also, Amtrak has taken ownership of 130 stations, hig and small, along the corridor, including Penn Sta-tion in New York.

Amtrak operates by agreement on the trackage of private railroads na most of its national routes. This has led to difficulties because of rough track, good enough for slow-moving freights but rough for Amtrak passengers.

New Electric Locomotives However, Amtrak is well along with a massive reequipment program to re-place the hand-me-downs it inherited from the private railroads. New electric locomotives, powered from overhead wires or third rails, and diesel-electric locomotives are already in service. And near-ly half of the 492 new Amfleet passenger coaches ordered are in service, mainly in the East. These coaches have the look of an airliner's first-class compartment, and include facilities for meal service at the passenger's seat

The plushest of the new Amfleet coaches are cafeclub cars with first-class sections of wide seats, two on one side of the aisle and one on the other in the latest

European style. Starting next spring, Amtrak expects delivery on the first of 249 new bilevel cars ordered for the Western routes out of Chicago and on the West Coast. These cars reflect Amtrak's conviction that long-haul cross-country routes should be continued. Originally, the order was to include 55 bilevel "ecoo-

omy" sleeping cars, without private lavatory facilities in the individual compartments. Just recently, Amtrak made a change in the order. Now there are to be 34 "economy sleepers and 36 "mixed-class" sleepers. The latter will have 10 first-class double hedrooms, including private lavatory facilities, on the upper level, and the cheaper "econ-omy" class compartments

Man Threatens Woman With Gun

A man who said he had been an Army marksman menaced a former woman friend with a starter's pistol and then kept authorities at bay in Levittown, L.I., for four and half bours by threatening to kill himself and police officers with an MI carbine, the Nassau County police said. The suspect, identified as Jeffrey Turkell, 32 years old of 8 Swirt Lane, Levittown, finally heeded the police pleas to surrender. No shots were exchanged. According to a police spokesman, Lisa Manrosh, 19, of 68 17th Street, Jericho, had arrived home and parked her car at 3:55 A.M. "when she was grabbed from behind" by Mr. Turkell. When the woman screamed, Mr. Turkell "then put a gun to her head and fired one shot," the spokesman said, "but she said she felt no pain and continued to scream" and attracted the attention of two neighbors.

Goldin's Water Audit Assailed

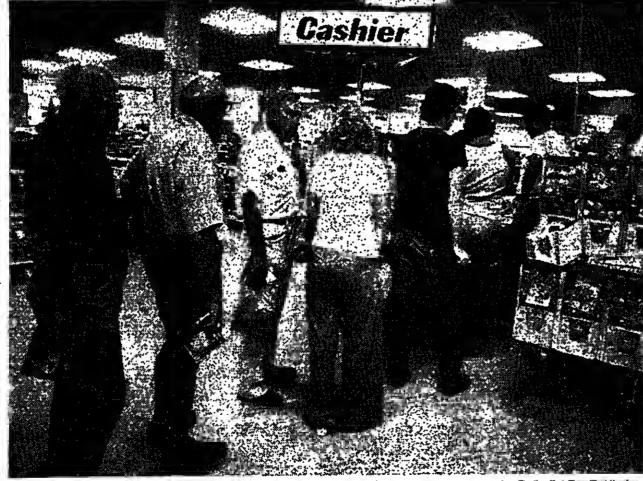

New York City's Environmental Protection Administrator, Robert A. Low, charged that an audit of the collection of water bills by Chy Comptroller Harrison J. Goldin was "publicity oriented." Mr. Low said Mr. Goldin's audit contained serious omissions and failed to mention collection of $8 million last year in back hills through use of a computer system, installed two years ago. "Mr. Goldin must be aware of the success of the program," Mr. Low said Mr. Goldin said his auditors discovered a number of instances of underbilling of misbilling in the Bureau of Water Register that cost the city about $3.5 million in lost revenue in Manhattan alone.

3 Sisters Die in Syracuse Fire

A fire claimed the lives of three young sisters in Syracuse, fire officials reported. The blaze broke out about 3:30 A.M. in a two-story frame house while the girls' parents were away. Authorities said it might have been caused by a cigarette. The dead were identified as Cindy Minton, 17 years old; Deborah Minton, 12, and their 9-year-old stepsister, Robin Fox.

From the Police Blotter:

A 21-year-old woman tentatively identified as Dione King, address unknown, was shot to death reportedly by a masked hurglar in the room of George Anderson, a friend, at 341 West 45 Street, near Eighth Avenue. After forcing his way into the room, the hurglar took $45 from Mr. Anderson and then shot the woman because she upbraided him ¶An unidentified man in his 20's, believed to be a member of a Jamaican Rastafarian sect, was found fatally shot in an alley at 45 Lennox Road, east of Flatbush Avenue, in the Flatbush section of Brooklyn. There is probably no Jewish institu-gon more shrouded in mystery, supersti-tion, misunderstanding and stereotype than the mikvah, in which the Jewish wife is commanded by the Bible to purify herself after every menstrual

Even though it is considered so crucial to the Jewish community that the construction of the ritual bath takes priority over that of the synagogue, the mik-van has been regarded variously as ar-Chaic, unnecessary, irrelevant and even absurd. And with the rise of feminist shinking, it has also been considered by some to be demeaning to women. Now, without fanfare or theological pressure, the mikvah and its demanding code of behavior, known as the laws of family purity, are undergoing a ren-

As Rabbi Ralph Pelcovitz of Congre-gation Kneseth Israel of Far Rockaway, Queens, put it, "If people had been asked 50 or 100 years ago, would the mikvah aurvive, the vast majority would have predicted that it would go the way of the dinosaur. But not only is it still here, it is flourishing and growing."

The resurgence cannot be documented by numbers, for attendance is considered so private a matter that womeo go to the mikvah only after the sunset and records are never kept.

- But it is apparent in the proliferation of seminars and lectures on the subject, in tours of mikva'ot (the plural of mik-vah) and open discussion of the practice from the pulpit and in Jewish women's organizations. The National Conference of Synagogue Youth of the "Union of Orthodox Jewish Congrega-tions of America has received sufficient demand for information to publish a book entitled the "Waters of Eden" that will be printed this summer.

Old mikva'ot in the cities are being renovated, new ones in the suburbs have been huilt or are on the drawing boards. A recent dinner given by the Mikvan Association of the North Shore, which oversees the four-year-old ritual bath in the Great Neck (L.L.) Synagogue, attracted more than 100 people.

"We're constantly growing. We draw from all over the North Shore of Loog Island, from Queens to Ronkonkoma," said Beppie Barth, the association presi-

Rabhis and Jewish scholars attribute the trend to a variety of factors. But. mainly they agree that it is indivisible from the general intensification of Judaism in this country, also evident in in-creasing numbers of day schools and yeshivas and the streogthening of Jewish education for young girls. In addition, it stems from iocreased pride in the heritage and from the search hy a disillusioned young generation for new moral standards.
"The mikvah is symbolic of what is happening today in Judaism: The periph-ery is fading away and the core is inten-sifying," said Rabhi Norman Lamm of the Jewish Center on West 86th Street, who last week was named president of Yeshiva University. "The mikvah is a good index because it is the most difficult discipline of all. Those who are becoming intense are going to the mikvah because it is the ultimate commitment." Rabbi Lamm is the author of a book on family purity and marriage, "A Hedge of Roses" that was published seven years ago and is now in its sixth printing.

Basically the code of family purity mandates that a couple refrain from all physical cootact (even holding hands) from the coset of the wife's menstrual period until seven days after the bleeding has ceased. Then she is to bathe her body and hair thoroughly, cut her fingernalls short so that they cannot hide a vestige of dirt and remove all foreign objects such as jewelry and Finally, she must totally immerse herself three times in the mikvah whila reciting a special prayer. The mikvah, itself built to rigid specifications, looks like a deep square bathtub with steps and contains water about four feet deep from a natural source such as rain. With immersion, the woman is considered purified and renewed.

God's Sanctification

She is also commanded to go to the mikvah just prior to her marriage (unmarried women do not go), after tha loss of virginity, after miscarriage and after giving hirth, all occasions of blood loss and thus in Jewish law, events demanding purification manding purification.

Although attended primarily by women, the mikvah is also used on an optional basis by men, and it is crucial to the convenient part of th to the conversioo process. In addition, Jews are commanded to submerge certain new dishes and utensils in mikvahs reserved for that purpose.

The premise that a woman cannot be touched for at least 12 days every month and the termination of abstioeoce with a hathing rite are the chief sources of misunderstanding and myth. Ritual cleanliness, Jewish scholars explain, has no connection with physical uncleanliness, and there is no English word that precisely captures its mean-ing. An individual can be rendered ritu-ally unclean in a variety of ways, all which have some relation to death. Although there is no detailed explanation given either in the Bible or the Talmud for a woman's state of impurity during menstruction, the loss of blood is interpreted as the end of a potential life and is taken as a token of death.

The significance underlying the clearly delineated rules also resists easy explanation, but it is said that the rite is intended to give God's sanctification to the physical relationship and to elevate the sexual act to a holy plane.

Question of Service "It offers a spiritual cleansing that says the body is holy, and it gives sanctity to the sexual relationship," said Rabbi Steven Riskin of the Lincoln Square Synagogue. "The prohibition against sexual contact during the seven days after menstruation was added in Taimudic Law to make the man and regreen more beloved to one another. woman more beloved to one another.

weman more beloved to one another.

The element of romantic love dies naturally with total accessibility."

Stringent though it may be, the code of family purity is not antifeminist, Rabbi Riskin said, echoing theologiana and practicing women alike. "It gives the woman the opportunity to be active. Unless she goes to the mikvah, the sexual relationship cannot be resumed."

Unless she goes to the mikvan, the sexual relationship cannot be resumed."

The law also stipulates that a wife not serve her husband through such tasks as cooking and making beds during the proscribed period. Rabbi Saul Berman, chairman of tha department of Judaic studies at Stern College of Yeshiva University, explained, "Just as the mikvah means that sex is not to be taken for granted so is the law designed taken for granted, so is the law designed to prevent people from viewing their partner as a service object. By restricting direct service, this demands evaluation of who is doing what to serve whom in the household."

In fact, many of the women who commit themselves to the ancient decree regard it as insurance against marital boredom and dissension, a benefit originally described in the Talmud.

'Mystical Process'

Devora Wohlgelernter, assistant professor of mathematics at Baruch College, mother of five children ranging in age from 2 months to 8 years and wife of an Orthodox rabbi, observed, "It forces you to be open about sex and prevents, anger from festering. You can't postpone going to the mikvan because you're angry and a couple is ohli-gated to resume relations afterward. So you must resolve the slights and hurts, you must talk things out because you can't hop into bed with someone you're furious with."

Shellee Berman, a psychiatric social worker at Stern College and member of the faculty at the Wurzweiler School of Social Work at Yeshiva University, sets up a structure to develop a relationship on other levels. Personally I see this as an afformation of my own separation and uniqueness; it allows me to be an individual and a partner."

Attendance at the mikvah would not be growing if it were not for its attraction to a breed of young women brought up outside the strict confines of orthodoxy. And no one more clearly personifies the new mikvah adherent than Linda Neuberger of North Woodmere, L.I., a 32-year-old mother of three, who had her first immersion two years ago in rusalem. Mrs. Neuberger, the daughter of Maurice Villency, the owner of the furniture stores, and her husband, Roy S., the son of Roy R. Neuberger, the art col-lector, were both raised in liberal homes and educated in the Ethical Culture sys-tem. They spent a good part of their 13-year marriage "searching for a pur-pose," devoting themselves in the 1960's to the peace, ecology and conservation movements. By chance they happened to hear Esther Jungreis, the charismatic founder of Hineni, a Jewish educational movement that operates schools all over the world. "Finally all our questions were and wered," Mrs. Neuberger said. "We drove two hours each way every week to at-tend her class, and two years ago we went to Israel with her and for the first time lived a Jewish life," Mrs. Neuberger said. "When I went to the mikvah in Jerusalem, I felt as if I had been reborn, as if I were a new bride."

Harvesting Acorns in Central Park

By CRAIG CLAIBORNE (a subject about which we conceded to have limited knowledge) we discovered to our amusement-and amazement-that acorns as food are taken with considerable seriousness by numerous readers. When it comes to cookery, this product of the mighty oak, we learned, has its champions and detractors.

Sarah S. Hall of Coocord, Mass., takes the negative grew. She states that she had read the techniques for leaching and roasting acorns written by a highly respected nature authority, and, she ewent on: Encouraged hy his de-scription I once collected acorns with a very small Boy. We shelled them, diswarded the wormy ones (of which there were a good number) and then boiled and boiled them as Ewell Gib-bons recommended. We roasted them and ground After all this work we had scant cup of meal to give away for Christmas. The away for Christmas. The miffins we made, using only a tablespoon or so of the finest emphatically not al-ready buttered as Mr. Gib-bons said.

Wild Food Specialist

From this experience I can say that no one in his right mind would try to eat an un-leached acorn, and only people with very small boys should undertake the shelling-leaching-rossing process. So maybe our acorns weren't the eating kind. What I suspect is that acorns really don't make very good eating unless you're far from home and terribly hungry with a lot of time on your hands."

On the other hand, we have it from another authority on wild food cookery that acorns have multiple, deli-cioua uses as food. The writer is Gary Lincoff, who teaches wild food cookery in Manhattan, demonstrating such dishes as wild mush-room soup, beach plom bread and sassafras tea, and wrote rus as follows:

Leaching Methods

"I gather acorns here in New York City and I make a number of dishes with them that might interest you. There are at least a dozen kinds of acorns available free for the gathering in the city; all are edible, and palatable after leaching, and all can be turned into delicious dishes. I gather about 50 pounds of acorns a year from Central Park, or less than one-quarer of the acoms from a single tree. I gather mostly those from the turkey oak,

New York City Wild Foods Workshop, 219 West 70th Street, New York, N. Y. 10023. Because of a typographical error last week, the letter from Carolyn Korshin was unclear and the following are the points that she was making:

"I write in your defense as to the correct grammatical structure of your 'slice onions thinly.' In your sectence is a transitive verb followed hy the direct object 'onions' and the adverb 'thinly' describes the manner of slicing the onions. The same applies to 'chop onions finely.'"

All the loosened dirt is shoveled into a sieve, or screeo, next to the pit, where another person sifts the dirt from any small bones, teeth or stone flakes that might have been missed

About two feet down in the La Jolla pits, excavators encountered a number of rocks-some rounded cobbles and some chipped ioto tools -and bits of bonc. It was what archeologists call a "living floor"—an old land surface on which people had once lived at least long enough to leave signs of their presence. Some, of the bone was given to Dr. Bada for deting with his new technique. called amino acid racemization. Without this method, the living floor could not have been dated, for the only other method, carbon-14, consumes as much as a pound of bone and no ooe bone was that hig. Dr. Bada'a method works on a fraction of an ounce. Until now much archeological evidence has re-mained undated because the researcher was unwilling to destroy it in the dating proc-

Also, the carboo-14, or ra-diocarbon, method is useless for materials older than about 40,000 years whereas race-mization can date objects up to ebout a million years old. How the Method Works

The new method is based on the fact that amino acids, the building blocks of pro-teins, can exist in two chemically identical forms that. in structure, are mirror imeges of one another. In analytical devices, one form will deflect polarized light to the left while the other form deflects it to the right. In living bone protein, all the amino acids are in the socalled left-handed form but in death the amino acids, which do not deteriorate, begio "flipping" into the rightbanded form. This phenome-non, called racemization, occurs at a virtually constant rate over thousands of years. A measurement of the relative proportions of left- and right-handed amino acids will indicate how long the process has been going on.

Dr. Bada took the bone to his laboratory at the Scripps Institution of Oceanography about a mile down the coast in La Jolla.

There, io a jungle of glass tubes, flasks of bolling acld, condensers, filters and other equipment, Dr. Bada cleaned the specimen, dissolved it to liberate the amino acids and separated them out from all the other bone constituents. Then be put the dissolved amino acids into a $20,000 machine called an amino acid analyzer. This commecially available device, an automated laboratory the size of a telephone booth, prints out a reiativ amounts of the two forms of each amino acid.

Results of Test

The racemization process determined that the bones were between 7,000 and 8,000 years old. Back at "the dig" the stu-dents had exposed the en-tire living floor, drawn the positions of the artifacts on a diagram of the pit, photo-graphed the floor, and removed the stones to continue digging.

Several days later, at a depth of almost four feet, the excavators uncovered more bone. After carefully scratching away the encrust-ed, sandy soil, Dr. Kennedy determined it to be a human burial. She found the crumbling leg bones of a person who, she deduced from the position, had been buried on his back with the knees ms back with the knees drawn up against the chest.

Dr. Bada took a small piece for dating and found that the person had died between 17,000 and 20,000 years ago. In a nearby pit, at about the same depth, other students found a living other students found a living other students found a living floor with some two dozen smooth and chipped stones.

One smooth stone was heavily worn, suggesting that it had been rubbed against an-other flat stone. This is how many people grind grain for cooking. Such atones are most typical of an agricultural people and agriculture is not known from anywhere in the world of 20,000 years ago. Dr. Smith believes that the Californians of that time were not cultivating grains but were more likely gathering wild seeds. Instead of trying to lift the fragile leg booes out, excavators cut away the surrounding dirt and removed the eotire hardened chunk of sandy soil io which the bones were still partly embedded. Dr. Kennedy took the whole block to a laboratory at Scripps where she can remove it more carefully while the digging goes on. The dig has not yet found enything to match the 40,000year age of the bones discovered there 50 years ago, but Dr. Smith and Dr. Kennedy plan to continue digging through August.

If the pits fn the chancelor's back yard yield nothing further, there may be a better chance on the adjacent bluff where excavations are just beginning in an aree of several acres, virtually the last uninhabited spot on the La Jolla coast.

Also taking part in the dig is Dr. Richard S. MacNeish, an ercheologist whose excavations in the Pikimachay cave in Peru have established the presence of man at several stages ranging in age from 9,000 to 20,000 years ago.

Dr. MacNeish. director of the Peabody Foundation for Archeology, is a leading ex-ponent of the view that man entered the New World about 70,000 years ago. That the most recent time, when sea levels were low enough to expose the Bering land bridge, that people could have crossed into North America io time to reach southern California by 48,000 years ago.

Theory on Tools

Dr. MacNeisb and a growing number of his colleagues believe that when mao arrived, he brought with him no tools better than stones crudely fashioned into irregular choppers and flakes.

Until recently most archeologists believed that the earliest stone tools of the new world were the beautifully shaped and deadly Clovis and Folsom spear poiots, named for their place of first discovery in New Mexico.

Dr. Paul Mertin of the University of Arizona has gained considerable attention in recent years with his theory that the first Americans, already highly skilled hunters equipped with such weapons as they crossed into North America 12,000 years ago, were responsible for the extinction of mammoths. mastodons, giant ground mals that took place about

Dr. MacNeish disputes this. He cites the growing body of evidence that man was here long before the great wave of extioctions and that he was using tools much more primitive than the Clovis or Folsom points.

"The available archeological evidence not only fails to support the Martin hypothesis but tends to refute it," Dr. MacNeish wrote in the May-June issue of American Scientist. His report anain the New World, including method. Ooe archeological leader who disputes the older dates for man's entry into the New World is Dr. Robert Heizer, now retired from the University of California at Berkeley.

"Man may have come into the New World 40,000 years ego or longer. There's no reason he couldn't have," Dr. Heizer said in an interview. "But there's just no good evidence for it and until we have that evidence I don't think we should say it happened then."

Method Questioned

Dr. Heizer believes the dates produced by Dr. Bada's racemization method are suspect. The thing that is wrong, he says, is that "they're too

Dr. Bada has beard the same reaction from other anthropologists.

"When we first published this in Science, I was very naive about the emotional reaction from anthropologists." Dr. Bada says. He added that physical scientists who reviewed his methods were unanimous io their praise but that anthropologists who believed man was a late comer to the New World asserted that the method must be faulty.

Dr. Bada has used his method on archeological sites that heve also been dated by the long-accepted carbon-14 method and found consistent agreement. His dating of bones from African and European sites beyond the car-bon-14 limit has agreed well with dates derived by other methods.

"I don't see why the technique should work everywhere else in the world but not here," Dr. Bada contends, "If Jeff's dates hold," says Dr. Kennedy, referring to Jeffrey Bada, "then you have something resembling Cro-Magnon man in the New World before you have him in Westero Europe."

Another Exponent Although it may take anthropology some years to completely accept the idea that man arrived in North America 70,000 years ago, at least one archeologist thinks even that revision in ortho-doxy will not be enough. Dr. George Carter, who worked as an archeologist in San Diego decades ago and is now a professor at Texas A&M University, is convinced he has found evidence that man was in the San Diego area at least 100,000 years ago and has argued his case for maoy years. He also says there is some evidence from Mexico of man living there 250,000 years ago. Dr. Carter's theory has long been discounted by orthodox archeologists. The chipped stones that be says man-made are called "Cartifacts" by others, and presumed to be the result of natural, processes.

Dr. Carter, now 64 years old and relishing his position as maverick, is spending the summer in La Jolla, visiting the digs frequently and offer-ing all kinds of advice. Although be is not mentioned in Dr. Smith's textbook, no one minds his presence, for it was Dr. Carter who started the current revolution by asking Dr. Bada to date the Del Mar skull that everyone else had forgotten about.

Music: A Festival of Contemporaries

Works at Tanglewood And Led by Ozawa

By DONAL HENAHAN

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 15— Festivals of contemporary music too often are grim, ioviess affairs where associate professors with hopes of becoming professors and professors with bopes of earning tenure gather to hear their works played by poorly rehearsed graduate students.

But Tanglewood's Festival of Contemporary Music, which is spon ored each summer by the Berkshire Music Center and the Fromm Music Foundation at Harvard, has been breaking out of that sterile format in recent years. The festival's opening coocerts this weekeod demonstrated brilliaotly how to interest a larger public in the music of this cen-tury and escape the dead end of in-group parochiality.

The major share of applause belonged to Seiji
Ozawa and the Boston Symphony, whose program last night in the Music Shed flared into one of the most exciting concerts this reviewer has heard in a long time. It was a difficult pro-gram on the face of it, diffigram on the face of it, diffi-cult to play and difficult for a Saturday night audience at Tanglewood to accept. But Mr. Ozawa's troops overran

First there was George Crumb's 1968 Pulitzer Prizewinner, "Echoes of Time and the River (Echces II)," a land-mark feat of imagination and technique that involves solemn processionals by the orchestral players, whistled chords, a gong whose pitch is "bent" by being lowered into a bucket of water, perambulating mandolin player and much else that tiptoes aloog the borderline.

Mr. Ozawa's intimacy with the work's every nuance and understanding of its dreamlike qualities made for a performance of hypnotic beauty. Although some of the work's appeal is visual and theatrical, one must hope that the Bostonians have been asked to put this achieve-

Switching moods and styles with ease, Mr. Ozawa and the orchestra made a sens-uously attractive interlude of Charles Griffes's "Three Poems of Fiona Macleod," a cycle composed in 1918 in a manner evocative of late Debussy or Wagner's "Wesen-bonck Lieder." Phyllis Bryn-Julson's pure soprano seemed a bit light for the work and occasionally was smothered by the orchestral lushness, but she caught the darkly mystical images sensitively.

Mr. Ozawa then blew the top off the evening with the most precise and yet the most exhilarating perform-ance of the Ives Symphony No. 4 that this listener has ever encountered. Details that program notes discuss but that can almost oever be picked ont in a performance leaped to the fore, and again it was clear that Mr. Ozawa the Boston were on close, friendly terms with the

One could hardly have demanded such easy authority of the students who played a program of new chamber music in the Theater-Concert Hall yesterday afternoon. The level of performance, however, was ex-tremely high, and in the case of Betsy Jolas's "Qua-tour II" nothing less than re-

The Jolas piece, written in 1964, is a string quartet in which a soprano is substituted for the first violin. Elizabeth Parcells sang the atonal line with its wordless phonetic fragments, occasionally referring to a tuning fork for orientation, and gave a superbly articulated; precisely pitched performance.

Of four newer works at this opening concert, the one that impressed most at first hearing was a tape piece, "Sultanes" (1975), hy Ahmed Essyad, Mr. Essyad, a Moroccan, has produced a totally electronic tone poem that fuses many elements of North African tribal music, featuring layer upon layer of percussive rhythms, cries that sound half-human and that sound half-human and balf-animal, and a crafty mix of reedy timhres. One could at least detect a feeling hn-man being behind this music, which is always interesting.

William McKinley's "Paintings No. 2" (1975) attempts to depict the four seasons (winter is full of rushing chromatic scales, for instance, and summer is a seemingly eodless flute solo). But the style is too abstract or faceless-international to make such impressionistic points vividly.

Dennis Riley's "Concertino" (1976), commissioned by the Fromm Foundation and the Berkshire Music Center, proved to be loaded down with post-Webern clichés. all-Ellington week just ended.
Over the weekend, the festival at the New York State
Theater made a special place for dance works by young black choreographers who were asked to use Duke El-lington's music. The works were commissioned by the Alvin Ailey Repertory Workshop, a junior company attached to the Ailey organiza-tion. Sylvia Waters, the workshop's artistic director, sees the group not only as an independent performing unit but also as an experi-mental choreographic outlet.

Saturday afternoon's performance, introduced in a very lively fashion by Patty and Sara of Labelle, the singing group, offered works by Alvin McDuffie and Gus Solomons Jr. As always, Mercer Ellingtoo, with the Duke Ellington orchestra, was on hand to share the conducting with Joyce Brown, the Ailey company's conductor. Also present was Anita Moore, the Ellington band's fabulous singer. Mr. McDuffie is now a dancer in the "The Wiz," and it would be easy to say that his "New Orleans Junction"

"Alley Celebrates Elling-no," Alvin Alley's tribute to tunately, it fell short of the slickness this term might imply. Set to a few move-ments from Ellingtonis "New Orleans Suite," the ballet was sleek rather than slick. sleek rather than slick.

The choreography tended to be pelvis to pelvis, but the conventions of its jazz idiom gave it the same restraint as flamenco. The company, especially strong on the male side, felt right at home in its four sections (one had a drafour sections (one had a dra-matic vignette but most were danced in unisoo).

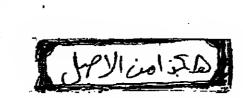

It was natural that the dancers bad some trouble with "Forty." As a disciple of Merce Cunningham, Mr. Solomons works out of an avant-garde esthetic remote from that the workshop usually performs in.

Fragmentary movement and dancers in the lean look that usually takes them into ballet's fourth position are not the images associated with the steady fluent pulse of Ailey dancers. Yet the dancers made a good try, and this group piece's burnor clearly came across. It was, as Mr. Alley himself pre-dicted, a refreshing view of the Ellington piano pieces that Mr. Solomons interspersed between his silences.

public domain, taking liberties has become common-London's Philbeach Society, for instance, prepared British audiences last year by producing the Victorian operates in Edwardian costume. The adventurous Philbeachers were in fact hosts for the 65 New Yorkers' invasion of England. The Philbeach and the vil-lage group also presented a joint production of "The Pirates of Penzance," for which the one-act "Trial by Jury" was a curtaio-raiser. The two community theater groups planned this summer's co-production of "Pirates" in London not just as a Bicentennial observance, but as the first half of a home-andhome series. The Philbeach intends to perform with its

The joint "Pirates" had British and American soloists. a mixed chorus, a British stage director and an American musical director, but the staging was entirely traditional, except for one detail. The spirit of the occasion was sufficient to overcome those inevitable moments without which no amateur production would be com-plete: the very model of a modern major general (Brit-ish) who dried up in the mid-die of his big solo, and a chorus girl (American) whose costume snagged so firmly on the scenery that only a half-dozen Amazonian tugs could dislodge it, incidentally shreddiog it, These mishaps aside, many in the audience would have en surprised to learn that the "Pirates" production had been rehearsed only one week, rather than the more customary period of three months. The Village group's members, whose airfare came out of their own pockets, had spent the first half of their two-week visit sightseeing.

"Still," said one of the Americans, "we learned more about the English than we ever coold have if we hadn't stayed with them in their apartments and worked with them too." Philbeach members learned that the Village group is one of very few operetta socie-ties in New York, and thus enjoys a wide reputation out-

One of the American troupe's principal discoveries was that despite structural differences the two groups are similar in membership profile (young, middle-class) and musical approach (d'Oyly Carte all the way). Ronald W. Noll, the group's musical director, said, "Everybody varies from the score as published, and before we came over I sent the Philbeach peo ple notes oo how I varied the score. It turned out they had already varied the score in the same way. "I guess all over the world people are performing Gilbert and Sullivan based on the way it's done on the d'Oyly Carte recordiogs, instead of rigidly following the original score. So we had few problems coordinatiog the two choruses. British initiative was re spoosible for the project. Ian Fioch, a British employee of the International Business Machines Corporation, was transferred to New York several years ago. Upoo arrival be sought a light opera group similar to the one he be-longed to in London, the Philbeach. After he dis-covered the Village group, he and other Britons pushed the idea of an exchange. The Americans were reluctant at first to do a joint productioo. "They said it will surely be a sbambles," recalls the Philbeach musical director, Tim Godfrey. "Yet we all prepared so thoroughly beforehand that at the first sing-through the cast of nearly 100 sounded like one

Two New Productions Staged at Santa Fe

By PETER G. DAVIS

Special to The New York Times SANTA FE, N. M., Aug. 15
—Strauss's "Salome" snd
Verdi's "La Traviata," both presented in new produc-tions by the Santa Fe Opera this summer, stand or fall on the performances of their leading sopranos. If an opera company does not have a remarkable singing actress to cope with the rigorous de-mands of either Salome or Violetta, it's best to do something else.

There were many fine things about Santa Fe's new but on Friday night Nancy Shade found the title role more than she could comfortably handle. Even when pushed to its limits, her voice lacks the power to soar over Strauss's full orchestra, and by the time she had arrived at the arduous final scene phrases tended to sag, while the texture and tone of her soprano began to curdle unpleasantly. Dramatically, there was lit-tle in Miss Shade's impersonation to suggest the amorality and unwitting depravity of Salome's character. Instead, she seemed to view the part as an all-too-knowing juvenile delinquent from a grade-B Hollywood film to whom sexual play with severed heads was a common everyday event. Such an approach merely vulgarizes the opera and dilutes its dramatic impact. Miss Shade's energy, determination and concentration were altogether admirable, but on the whole ber talents seem misdirected.

Ragnar Ulfung made a fascinating Herod, an addled, dissipated neurotic terrified of his own shadow, while Elaine Bonazzi's haughty Herodias provided a perfect foil. William Dooley appears to have found new vocal resources and sang a strong, vibrant Jokanaan, while William Lewis's firmly focused tenor made light work of Naraboth. The orchestra played the difficult score loudly hut accurately under John Crosby's efficient baton.

Bliss Hebert devised a simple, straightforward production marred now and then hy some dramatic non sequiturs (near the end of the opera, for example, Salome specifically sings a lengthy passage to the Page of Herodias who hy then was nowhere to be seen). Allen Charles Klein's set for Herod's decadent palace terrace was more utilitarian than atmospheric.

Violetta may be considerably less strenuous, vocally and athletically, than Salome, but the part still presents formidable problems for a young singer. Ellen Shade (no relation to Nancy Shade) had worked out most of them, and in last night's performance she appeared to be in command of almost every situ-

Miss Shade possesses a flexible, evenly knit soprano that negotiates florid coloratura passages as easily as it fills out a long, lyric line with a wealth of expressive detail. In fact, she has intellectualized the role so thoroughly that the character becomes lost amid al! the fine points. If she can add an element of spontaneity and genuine passion to her portrayal, Miss Shade could well hecome a great Violetta.

William Lewis's voice is rather overbearing for an ideal Alfredo, although he sang ardently and with honest conviction. Brent Ellis gave an interesting, off-heat impersonation of Germont as a fussy, nervous bourgeois country gentleman out of his element (a view occasionally contradicted by the music) and he sang the music magnificently.

Mr. Crosby also conducted the Verdi score, making it sound as loud and heavy as the Strauss opera the night before. The production henefited from Allen Charles Klein's sensible period sets and Patrick Bakman's fluid direction — rehearsal time is virtually unlimited in Santa Fe and the results were evident in the two lively party scenes which for once actu-ally looked like they were worth attending.

Joan K. Davidson, who resigned last week as chairman of the New York State Council on the Arts, said Friday that her administration had produced significant positive achievements and that when Governor Carey dismissed her he could cite no "specific" reasons for asking her to leave.

"He said he had heard complaints. He said some council members didn't like me," Mrs. The legislature ordered the council to develop a decentralization plan for the distribution of grants of $3,000 and under from various locations throughout the state. Reheated Sex Comedy at Little Carnegie "Invers and Other Relatives" is a poorly reheated

Italian sex comedy. A few years ago Salvatore Samperi made a very popular film, "Malizia," about the love affair—half mutual seduction, half moral blackmail of a 14-year-old boy and his family's beautiful young housekeeper. It was not a great film, but it possessed both bumor and sensual force.

"Lovers" is an attempt by the same director to cash in on the same theme. In this case the relationship develops between a boy and his sister-in-law. The whole family is on holiday at the beach and the boy's older brother— the sister-in-law's hushand is away most of the week in the city.

As in "Malizia," the peripheral aspects of the story, the details of the life of an upper bourgeois Italian family, are often funny. There is an engaging effort hy the father, a retired general, to assassinate his wife's pestilent lapdog. A small, hespectacled boy whose sandcastles

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. Aug. 15 - The Minnesota Twins' 9-8 victory over the Yankees today might sound like a fish story because it was one the Yankees let get away. But unlike fish stories, it is oo exaggeration to say the Yankees lost it by inches.

The inches were the distance between the tips of the fingers on Fred Stanley's glove and the pocket in Fred Stanley's glove. The distance was important because it was by that length that Stanley missed preventing Rod Cerew's ground ball from going into center field and allowing the deciding run to score in the eighth invited.

The Yankees, who had won five straight games and were quickly re-establishing their dominance in the Amer ican League's Eastern Divi-sion, burst to an 8-4 leed with five runs in the fifth inning, three oo a bomer by you'd be in trouble. Like when they walked Morgan the other night to fill the bases. I didn't go up there thinking I'd try to rip one over the fence, I was just up there to hit the ball. Walking Morgan to get to-me was no insult. It happened two days before in Chicago and that time I happened "With a right-hander pitching and first base open.

vou'd probably rather pitch to me than to Morgan. He's had more experience, and when you fill the bases you set up a force play at every base. So the other night [Friday against the Mets] I got a base hit and drove in two runs.

One Vote From Pete

"Has anybody mentioned the most valuable player award in your hearing?" Foster was asked. "There's talk about it around," he said, "but nobody's gonna give you that. That's something you got to win for

"Do you think he has a chance?" Anderson was asked. "I dnn't get into that," the manager said. "I'm not going to say anything that would offend any other player. I will say he's got some pretty good credentials." "If the season ended today," Pete Rose said, "I'd hava to vote for Foster as M.V.P." "That's what you said at the All-Star Game." he was

AT PHILADELPHIA-Greg Luzinski's 17th homer gave the Phils a 5-4 lead in the eighth inning but the Giants erupted for five runs in the ninth. Marty Perez doubled to score the tying run and Ken Reitz put San Francisco ahead with a sacrifice fly. Darrell Evans then blasted bis second homer of the game, a three-run blast, to secure the triumph.

Dodgers 3, Cubs 2 AT CHICAGO - Although Rick Monday hit a home run on the first pltcb of the game, Don Sutton recovered to record his fourth victory of the year over the Cubs. The Dodgers rallied off Bill Bonham for three runs in the fourth inning to set up their ninth victory over Chicago in

AT MONTREAL - Tom Griffin pitched his first complete game of the year, scat-tering six hits, to improve his won-lost record to 7-4. He benefited from a five-run rally in the sixth inning in which Willie Davis and Ted Knhiak stroked two-run sin-gles off Don Carrithers, who suffered his eighth loss io 14 decisions.

Braves 3, Cardinals 2 AT ATLANTA-Phil Niekro allowed only six hits and drove in e run with a sacrifice fly to post his 13th vic-tory in 21 decisions. Niekro, who struck out seveo, has knocked in seven runs in bis last seven games. The most damaging blow off bim was Joe Ferguson's ninth home run. The victory enabled the Braves to avert the loss of ell six games against the Dodgers at bome. The Braves have never been swept at bome in one season in their major-

Hassler gove up six hits before being re-lieved io the eighth by Mark Littell. Since joining the Royals last month, Hassler has won two of three decisions with a 2.11 earned-runaverage. He was acquired on waivers from California.

Brewers 5, Angels 3 AT ANAHEIM, Calif.—Bill Travers, who won only eight games in two previous seasons, recorded his 14th victory of the year against nine setbacks. Travers needed seventh-inning relief from Bill Castro when the Angels scored all their runs and trimmed Milwaukee's lead to one run, 4-3. Mike Hegan homered for Milwaukee.

AT OAKLAND, Calif. -After trailing by 6-0 through three innings, the A's rallied and scored their ointh straight triumph. They were behind, 7-6, with two out in the ninth, but Bill North doubled and scored on Bert Campaneris's single. Don Baylor then hit a pop fly that fell off the glove of Fred Lynn in short center field and Companeris scored the winning run. Stan Bahnsen, who retired all eight Boston bat-ters he feced, was the winniog pitcher. Home runs by Lynn and Dwight Evans paced Boston to the 6-0 lead that Rick Wise was un-able to hold.

The report calls for addi-tional state funding for such a laboratory. It suggests the Offtrack Betting Corporation contribute to the funding. OTB should participate, the report states, "and contribute to the well-being of the racing industry from which it derives its own existence." The study focused on two drugs, Lasix and Phenylbuta-zone, commonly known as "Bute." It said Lasix, which is supposed to lower a horse's blood pressure and misused in those states permitting it." It said Bute was of value as a medication in the treatment of leg and joint ailments, but uncovered no evidence that the drug speeds up a borse's running.

Among the recommendations in the report are:

¶Adoption of a uniform, 48-hour entry rule at all New York tracks.

¶Adoption of prerace blood testing on an experimental basis at all tracks where there is a "triple," in which the bettor picks the first, sec-ond and third horses in one race testing at thoroughbred and quarter-borse tracks. Taking blood samples from any horse that breaks

There's nolly one way to keep ahead of the ideas, the strategies, the people that make politics fascinating... by following the conventions and the campaign as the story unfolds in The New York Times.

Times coverage of the campaign has already begun, of course, with unusually detailed reports on all the primaries. Reports that included the most extensive polling operation ever undertaken by a newspaper . . . The New York Times/ CBS News poll.

The polls will cootinue throughout the campaign to help you understand what voters are thinking and how they're reacting. And as the polls continue, you'll get a detailed analysis of what they show.

Times coverage of the Democratic National Convention in July was unusually thorough, even by Times standards. It let you know more than just what was happening on the floor and behind the scenes. It offered thoughtful insight into the political process along with a full and color

Communists' Borrowing to Western Credit Markets May Total $40 Billion

By CRAIG R. WHITNEY

BONN, Aug. 15-A sharp increase this year in exports by the Soviet Union and its East-em European allies to their biggest non-Communist trading partner, West Germany, has at least temporarily reassured oficials worried about enormous debts the East has incurred to finance its trade deficits. The Soviet Union and its al-lies have been stepping up exports of raw materials and oil to West Germany in 1976 and thus may soon be able to re-duce their $38 billion to $40 hillion debt to the United States and Western Europe, according to leading bankers in Bonn.

The Communist countries have financed much of the dramatic increase in trade with West Germany, the United States and other Western countries in recent years by borrowing in Western credit markets. The West German central bank estimated the total outstanding last year at $30 billion to $35 billion. It has since risen closer to $40 billion, German bankers

Why the Nation's Grain Bins Are Full

By H. J. MAIDENBERG

Now that the nation is assured a record harvest of basic foodstuffs this year, according to the latest Federal forecast issued last Thursday, the commodity futures market is still left with two key questions. These are: Will farmers continue to withhold their grain from the market as they have beeo doing for weeks? If farmers decide to sell, who will buy their bumper crops?

The answers will determine prices of wheat, corn and soybeans until well into 1977. At present, producers of the winter wheat harvested last spring hold perhaps 85 percent of their crop of 1.6 billion busbels as well as a substantial amount of grain from the prior year's crop.

As a result, the nation is practically out of grain stor-age capacity at a time when the even bigger crops of corn, sorghum and spring wheat are now just starting to be cut across the country.

The situation in Kensas, The situation in Kensas, the leading wheat state, is typical Last week, an offi-cial of the Kansas Wheat Commission said in a telephone interview:

"All elevators here in Hutchinson are full. The railroads are embargoing ship-ments to all terminals down to Gulf ports. Just heard there were perbaps 2,000 cars backed up outside Salinas.
Can't unload them. No space

there as well."
Roderick Turnbull, an officer of the Kansas Board of Trade, the second largest grain exchange after the Chi-cagn Board of Trade, re-

"We reckon that farmers are still holding 85 percent of the 322-million-bushel winter wheat crop. The terminals here bave a capacity of 1.25 billion bushels of grain. They are full up.

"I just don't know where they are going to store the spring crops, corn, sorghums and spring wheat."

The winter wheat growers are willing to pay elevator operators a fee of about 1.5 cents a bushel a month to store their crop, and those who can't get space have been piling it into on-farm bins or onto the bare ground. The reason for the bolding action, obviously, is that farmers have been unwilling to sell grain since prices be-gan sliding just after the Fourth of July.

Since then, for example, Chicago December wheat futures prices have declined from $4.10 a busbel to $$3.40, December corn from $2.90 to $2.76 and soybeans for No-vember delivery from $7.50 to $6.59 a bushel.

The declines reflected the expectations of bumper crops of early spring had eased, as well as the drylog up of export business late in June. The nation can only absorb after the drought conditions

The storage problem was later compounded by flour milling and baking com-

each year, reached those terminals at a time exports

Most major baking and flour milling concerns, believing the price slide would be brief, bought large quantities of wheat last month. Many covered their needs for the rest of the year. Today these inventories are taking up grain efevator space throughout the farming region.

Can the farmers bold out for any appreciable length of time? Morton L Sosland, publisher and editor of Miling & Baking News, the lead-ing jnurnal of the industry, insists they can and will.

One reason, Mr. Sosland said in the latest issue of his weekly, is that farmers' debts today are equivalent to IB percent of their total assets. infrequently used as collateral for farm loans, with real estate and livestock inventories the prime source of farm borrowing power."

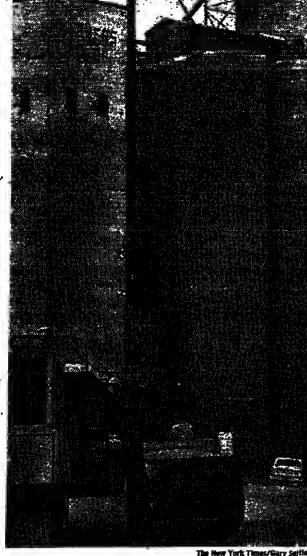

Mr. Sosland continued: "Thus, absent financial pressure to sell grain, the willingness of farmers to hold back will be deterred only by the assessment that the future value of the grain will be less than present

"Sophisticated growers know how to determine these "Sophisticated values. A great many farmers obviously are deciding that full bins are more desir-able assets than overflowing bank and dollar investment

That leaves the question of exports and so far there are few signs that overseas buyers are rushing into the mar-

Given this situation, the grain futures markets will be paying close attention to farmers' steadfastness, the storage problem and the fact that prices will more and more reflect storage fees.

The Commodity Research Bureau futures price index rose last Friday to 210.1 (1967—100) from 208.9 a week earlier.

Dannon Visits a Soviet Village

By LEONARD SLOANE Any American advertising egency that goes ell the way to the Soviet Union's Republic of Georgia to shoot a television commercial bad better have a good reason for doing so. Martseller Inc. had the reason, and it went. Ooe of Marteller's clients, Dannon Yogurt, has long had the largest share of the yo-gurt market in its distribution area east of the Missislopi River. Yet only one out of every four families eats yogurt. So this strategy has been developed: Try to broaden the market, with the expectation thet Dannon will get the largest share of the new yogurt customers.

Research hy Marsteller yielded the fact that men and women in some parts of Soviet Georgia consume enormous quantities of yogurt, a product that has been made product that has been made from milk for 4,000 years. And many of these people live past the age of 100. Therefore yogurt must be healthful, right? Surely a Dannoo commercial filmed there ought to give euthenticity to the company's claim that its food is "the natural one."

This piece of folklore provided us with a dramatic vehicle for our claim," said Peter Lubalio, vice president and creative director of the agency. "It would help us create en awareness for yogurt amoog an audience that we don't have now."

The Soviet authorities happily gave their permission for the filming — the commercial would show vigorous Soviet citizens who live to a ripe old age, so why not? Arlene Hoffman, who produces TV commercials for the agency, left early last month for Georgia, an ancient land adjoining the Black Sea. After she bad lined up individuals in three villages who were willing to be filmed, Mr. Lubalin and three other mem-bers of the agency team joined ber there.

"I had to speak to 14 different families before fioding the three sets of families that we filmed," Miss Hoffman said. "I spoke in English. which had to be translated first into Russian and then into Abkhazian, the language they speak in that region."

'Read the Label'

The United States Food and Drug Administration bes appointed Richard K. Manoff Inc. to handle its newly ex-panded "Read the Label" campaign.

The campaign will use public-service television and radio time to educate consumers ebout labeling and packaging rules. It will also expound on the importance of reading and understanding label-contect information.

The previous campaign dealt only with nutrition labeling. This one will go a little further, covering the labeling of food and over-the-counter drug, cosmetic and toiletry products.

The Manoff agency has also handled projects in nutri-tion education for the United States Agency for Interna-tional Development.

E.E.C.'s Trade Deficit Increased in Quarter

BRUSSELS, Aug. 15 (Reuters)-The European Economic Community's trade deficit was up by $4.8 billion in the first four months of this year, compared with the same period last year, the E.E.C. Commission said in a report released today.

The commission said a rapld rise in exports from the nine E.E.C. member countries to North America and especially to the Uoited States balanced out a rise in Commoo Market imports from the Elsewhere, imports to the E.E.C. rose faster than the Nine's exports. This was chiefly due to bigher imports of oil and raw materials from developing countries.

But the trade gap with Japan also wideoed and the E.E.C. surplus with other European countries had been reduced as these shelter countries began to recover from the recession.

Restaurant Spending Up One of every three food dollars now is spent away from home and the National Restaurant Association estimated the ratio will be one to two by 1980. policymaking roles, as tokens of appreciation to favored segments of industry, as booby prizes for political candidates rejected by the voters."

What is true in normal years is doubly true in what may be the last months of control of the White House by either major party.

Margita E. White, for example, was the director of the White House Office of Communications. As a result of an internal battle within the staff of the President, according to sources in the White Honse and Congress, Mrs. White was nominated for a seven-year term to the Federal Communications Commission on July 12 after it was decided to oust her from her position in the White House.

Experienced Congressional staff members say that, in an apparent effort to win Senate backing for the con-firmation of Mrs. White, the Ford Administration on July 2I numinated to anniher F.C.C. seat Joseph R. Fogarty, an assistant to Senator John O. Pastore, the Rhode Island Democrat who for many years has been chairman of the Senate Communications subcommittee.

Though a hearing has been scheduled on both F.C.C. nominations for Aug. 24, confirmation is far from certain on either, partly becanse of Senator Pastore's reported belief that Mrs. White is not qualified and partly because of the in-creasing Democratic reluc-tance to approve Ford Administration appointments.

Two other Administration nominations that are thought to be in serious trouble are those of Thaddeus A. Garrett Inc. (to the Coosumer Product Safety Commission) and Patrick J. Delaney (to the Securities and Exchange Commission).

Mr. Garrett is a minister in the A.M.E. Zion Church, a special assistant to Vice a special assistant to Vice President Nelson A. Rockefeller and a former assistant to Representative Sbiriev Chisholm, Democrat of Brooklyn, Though some Congressional Democrats view Mr. Garrett as lacking the necessary qualification, he has won the endorsement of six black representatives and Clarence Mitchell, Washing-ment of Colored People. Some critics of Mr. Gar-rest cite an incident in 1974 when he made an unsuccessful effort to be elected to the Ohlo Legislature as a Republican and ran an advertisement in an Akron black newspaper, The Re-porter, claiming the support Senators.

Mr. Delaney, who is opposed by the S.E.C.'s chairman, Roderick M. Hills, denied a report circulating in Congress that he had flunked out of the Georgetown University law school. "I just didn't complete all the courses," he said.

Not all of the Ford Administration's recent nominees are being turned down hy the Democratic Congress. David A. Clanton, a former member of the staff of Senator Robert P. Griffin, Republican of Michigan, was nominated on July 20 for a seven-year term to the Federal Trade Commission and has already been confirmed hy the Senate.

The explanation for this swift approval is the fact that Mr. Clanton is respected by Democratic members and staffers of the Senate Commerce Committee, with whom he frequently worked. "He's actually a closet Democrat and probably a better guy from our point of view than any Republican that Carter would nominate," said one Congressional

Another reason for the approval of Mr. Clanton and some other Administration nominees involves reports in Congress that the Carter team, unlike that of Senator John F. Kennedy in 1960, has supply.

In Connecticut the picture is mixed. A loan officer of the Connecticut Bank and Trust Company in Hartford, for example, said that some of the smaller banks in the state "might be running out" of student money, but he said, "We're a big bank and can bandle quite a few more." further news on inflation and Federal Reserve policy is awaited," he said.

Evidence of slower economic growth has been noticeable receotly. Unemployment increased in July, retail sales declined and inventories increased sharply — probably involuntarily.

The slower economic growth and slower rate of inflation may be strong enough factors to push interest rates down

Doctors Prove You Can Help Shrink Swelling Of Hemorrhoidal Tissues Due To Inflammation. Relieve Pain And Itch Too. Gives prompt temporary relief from hemorrhoidal pain and itch in many cases.

Doctors have found a most effec-tive medication that actually helps shrink painful swelling of hemorrhoidal tissues caused by infection. In many cases, the first applications give prompt relief for hours from such pain and Tests by doctors on bundreds upon hundreds of patients showed this to be true in many cases. The medication the doctors used was Preparation H3—the same Preparation H you can get without a prescription. Ointment or suppositories.

About New York

li is 2 o'clock in the morning. A cab pulls up at the corner of 55th and Madison. A young woman gets out and disappears into the Hotel Winslow. Four bours later, she reappears. The doorman has arranged for another cab to be woiting. She dissolves, like aspirts, into the watery dawn.

Wrong is the conclusion you have probably jumped to. She didn't perform a service. She purchased one. She was teased, stripped, cut, waxed. lashed, scalped, nailed, frosted and blow-dried. She may elso have been playing backgam-

In the watches of the night, she had a need. There was a place to go for it, like a bar or a delicatessen or a filling station or a coin-operated ice-cube machine. Since her need was to be beautiful, she went to Larry Mathews's 24-hour beauty parlor oo the second floor of the Hote) Winslow. In this town, at 2 o'clock in the morning you can't get, into most churches, but elec-

Larry Mathews says he is the father of the 24-bour beauty parlor. Beauty hes al-ways been his husiness. On being discharged from the Army with a camera, he set up shop as a studio photographer specielizing in pub-licity stills for aspiring starlets. Before he snepped, he liked to work on their eyes and mouths, which led him into theatrical makeup and cosmetics. Considering his clientele—showgirls at the Copa and the Latin Quarter—a 24-hour beauty parlor was a natural. He opened his first in 1953 in the Great Northern Hotel. (Hotels are nice for all-night beauty parlors because women can taxi to and from them down mean streets, and there's someone officially protective in the lobby. Before long, he was engineering the images of the nightcrawlers and early birds of the TV talk shows, not to mention Eleanor Roosevelt, Marilyn Monroe and Jacqueline Susann.

As of two years ago, he was the William Randolph Hearst of after-hours body styling, with a chain of 131 salons from New York to Miami to Las Vegas to Hollywood. Then, except for the Madison Avenue shop, he sold out.

Mr. Mathews aspires to being a kind of Johnny Appleseed of beauty secrets: Get them out of the salon and into the home. The Hotel Winslow, he said the other morning as the place filled up with husiness-women get-ting a treatment before they went to work, is his 'labora-

Beauty is too expensive: "No haircut is worth $50. Every month you have to cut it again. It's ridiculous to spend $35 to have your legs waxed. It's even more ridicu-lous to spend $100 for an ounce of perfume. A woman's lucky if she finds two essences in her whole life that work with her body oils. If she finds them, are they supposed to be so expensive that she dabs them on only for special occasions? If my wife spent $100 for an ounce of perfume, I'd have to shoot

The 24-Hour Beauty Part

By JOHN LEONARD

Methews is the American distributor of Simila, a line of "French fragrence copies" developed in Switzerland by Gabriel and François Fabiani. the Fabianis spent six years learning to duplicate the fragrances of Chapel, Arpège, Joy, Shalimar and Bal á Versailles. The perfume industry aued them, and lost.

"They don't own the es-sence," says Mr. Mathews. They own the lahel. You don't wear the label. You wear the smell. A smell's not a Gucci belt. Why pay for the lebel, the bottling and the advertising? With Simila, you can smell like Chanel for $10 an ounce."

He has his own line of cosmetics, which is soon to go, along with the fragrance copies, into Larry Mathews Cosmetics Centers — mirrored modules," or beauty booths —in 800 department stores and shopping centers. The first such module is sched-uled to open in Gimbe)s this uled to open in Gimbels this fall. He expects to sell $1 million worth of Simila alone by Christmas.

And then there is Hair Off. On the morning he talked to e reporter, Mr. Mathews was also filming a television commercial for Hair Off, a do-in-yourself depilation kit he developed by accident.

"We were trying to build a machine thet wouldn't burn women during waxing," he says. "We stumbled onto says. "We stumbled outo Heir Off. It's going out to every country in the world. We're sending it to 100,000

On body hair, Mr. Mathews is eloquent. "Women shouldn't sbave," he says. "You shave and you're grow-ing a beard all over your body. You're making stubble for yourself. For Hair Off, all you need to know is which way your hair grows, then rub it in. It tears out the roots. It keeps you smooth for 12 weeks. And even if you neglect yourself for another mooth after thet all you've got is baby fuzz, not stubble."

Mr. Mathews surveyed his salon, the backgammon tables and the portraits of beautiful women on the walls, "Pam-pering," he says, "is what it's all about." Starting at 3 o'clock every afternoon, he serves cocktails. "But the beauty business is a serious business, I'm sort of a sur-geoo. Not looking good is like a cancer. There's a lot of pain in not being besutiful. Many women want to commit suicide because of their looks. That's serious. The beauty salons of the future will al be attached to health clubs."

Perhaps, But perhaps, for once, Mr. Mathews is insufficiently ambitious. Why not put all of our anxieties into a single basket, a kind of convention center or super-market of the self? There would be a beauty parlor, a health club, a gym, confessional stalls, cells for meditation and sensitivity training, rumpus room for piano lessons and primal-screaming and speed-reading and short-hand and sex therapy and Berlitz.

We would creep in, as silent as a bruise, to be made up, mede happy. To be sad anti-American. Our mission, since the Enlighten-ment, has been to look better, feel better, do better, be better, every day in every way. That's why, like Mr. Mathews, we keep hustling.

TOTHE HEAR CONVENTION

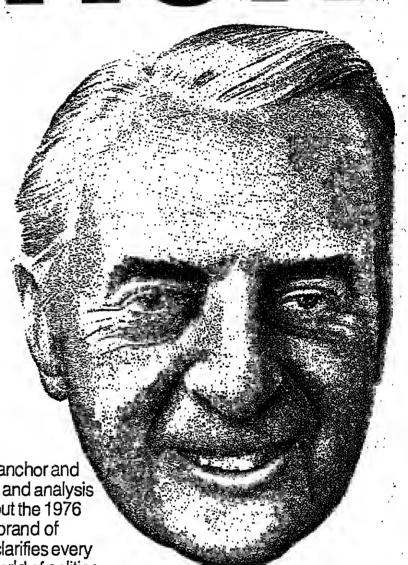

There's more than one way to report a political convention. ABC News brings you the heart of the convention. Everything that makes news. All the historic events livethe nominations, the balloting, and the acceptance speeches. And in addition to those events we're scheduled to cover, we have the flexibility to run long or break in on entertainment programming to report unexpected developments.

No matter whether you're a seasoned political buff or a first-time voter, you'll get the full impact of the convention excitement and drama from ABC News!

Harry Reasoner will be co-anchorman. covering the history-making events at the Republican Convention. (This is his 10th Presidential convention.) He will also be presenting background and historical features on the lighter side of convention activities—the kind of material he does so well.

Howard K. Smith will co-anchor and continue the commentary and analysis he has provided throughout the 1976 campaign. His particular brand of observation and opinion clarifies every aspect of the confusing world of politics.

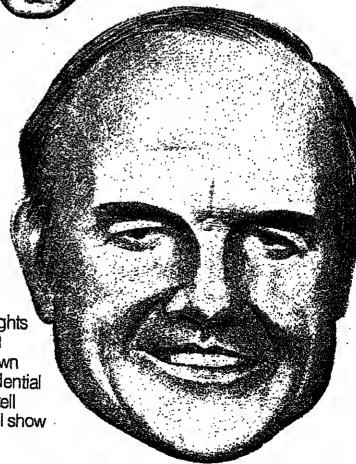

ou Harris, America's most astute political poll taker, will contribute vital information on how the country feels about each of the major candidates, as well as the issues which are shaping their political careers.

Floor Correspondents Ann Compton, Sam Donaldson, Herb Kaplow, and Frank Reynolds will b right in the middle of the action, reporting all the major events as

Sen. George McGovern joins ABC News convention coverage with insights into how Republican philosophy and strategy compare with those of his own party. As a former Democratic Presidential candidate, Sen. McGovern will also tell how it feels to star in the most colorful show in American politics,

ON THE NETWORK MORE PEOPLE ARE WATCHING.
